

An ACCOUNT of the EXPEDITION
OF THE
British FLEET to SICILY,

In the Years 1718, 1719 and 1720.

Under the Command of Sir GEORGE BYNG, Bart.

(Afterwards Viscount TORRINGTON)

Admiral and Commander in Chief of His MAJESTY'S Fleet; and His Majesty's Commissary and Plenipotentiary to the several Princes and States of Italy.

Collected from the ADMIRAL'S Manuscripts, and other Original Papers.

Judet asina parari Tutari Italiam, detrudere fribus hostem. Virg.

L O N D O N:

Printed for J. and R. TONSON in the Strand.

MDCCXXXIX.

1839

OLD COLLECTION

INDIA

Strategic ts Impact ity and ation Sha ans and co-Strate
ter Terro

To the Right Honourable the Lord Viscount Torrington.

MY LORD,

HAVING adventured to publish to the World this small Proof of my Regard to the Memory of Your Noble FATHER, Your Lordship will allow me to claim Your

A 2

Pro-

DEDICATION.

Protection of a Work, which I should never have attempted without Your Assistance. Your Lordship furnished me with the Materials; You will be my Surety to the Publick for the Truth of the Facts; and my greatest Encouragement to go about it proceeded from the judicious Remarks you communicated to me, made by Yourself on the Scene of Action, at an early Age, which usually tempts more to

DEDICATION.

to Pleasures, than to Thought and Observation.

You will perceive, MY LORD, that I do not enter into the Policy of the Councils which produced the War I describe, my only Design being to shew what Orders the Admiral received, and how well he executed them.

But I hope the Reader will find one Satisfaction, that it wipes off an Asper-sion thrown out in those Days, and believed by many ever

DEDICATION.

ever since, that the English Fleet surprized that of Spain without any Warning, and even contrary to Declarations in which Spain confided with Security.

I am,

My LORD,

Your Lordship's

most obedient humble Servant,

T. C.

T H E
P R E F A C E.

THE Writer of the following Sheets little thought of ever troubling the Publick under the Character of an Author. But the noble Lord, whose Father is the Subject of these Memoirs, having favoured him with a Sight of some of the Admiral's Manuscripts, and other Original Papers, concerning his Expedition to Sicily, the Perusal of them gave him that inward Pleasure, which naturally arises in Minds touched with what regards the Honour of their Country. And the same Principle led him to regret, that an Expedition so well conducted, and so much to the Reputation of the British Flag, should be suffered either to sink by Length of Time into Oblivion, or be left to an imperfect and obscure Relation of it

P R E F A C E.

it among the common and general Transactions of the Times; which seemed of Importance sufficient to deserve an accurate and distinct Account of it. These Sentiments, joined with a great Respect for the Memory of the Admiral, to whom he owed the highest Obligations, put him upon attempting a Task that was worthy of a better Hand. But though these were his Motives to the Work, Fidelity to Truth has been his sole Guide in the Conduct of it. It is the only Qualification of an Historian he pretends to; it is the only Thing he dares think commendable in the Performance; and the Reader may be assured, that no Considerations whatsoever could induce or tempt him to magnify any Man's Character, at the Expence of his own.

The Reader is desired to observe, that the New Style is used throughout the Book, as well in Domestick as Foreign Transactions, for the sake of Uniformity in the Dates, and to render the Narrative less perplexed.

An

An Account of the EXPEDITION
OF THE
British FLEET to SICILY,
In the Years 1718, 1719 and 1720.

HE Treaties of Utrecht and Baden did not procure that firm and durable Peace, which Europe wanted after a War of such universal Ruin. The original Cause of the Quarrel remained still undetermined, and, in the opinion of all Men, • would be one day a Source of farther Troubles. The Emperor could not be brought to renounce his Pretensions to the Crown of Spain; and King Philip refused to confirm to that Prince the Provinces dismembered from him in Italy and Flanders, on any other Condition. All that the interposing Powers, who laboured towards their Reconciliation, could effect, was, that the Emperor consented to evacuate the Principality of Catalonia, with the Isles of Majorca and Iviça; and the King of Spain agreed to a Cessation of Arms in Italy, and the adjacent Isles, situated in the Mediterranean Sea, until a general Peace should be made.
B confirm

In this condition of Affairs, the Emperor sent an Army into Hungary against the Turks, who had invaded the Dominions of the Venetians, his Allies. The Pope, to whom Wars of that kind are always agreeable, obtained repeated Assurances from the King of Spain, both by Letters, and by Declarations from his Ambassador at Rome, “ that he would “ not undertake any thing against
 “ the

“ the Interests of the Emperor, whilst “ his Arms were employed in so reli“ gious a Cause ; and would even “ aid the Venetians with a Squadron “ of Men of War and Gallies.” For which Purpose he obtained from the Court of Rome an Indult for raising extraordinary Subsidies on the Ecclesiastical Revenues in Spain and the Indies. Accordingly in the Year 1716, he sent out a small Squadron of six Men of War and five Gallies, which arrived too late in the Levant, to be of any Service to the Venetians, who had before sustained a naval Combat with the Turks, and had almost finished the operations of the Campaign. But, the next year, the the Spaniards made such extraordinary Preparations by Sea and Land, as gave a Jealousy, that, instead of passing up the Levant to the Assistance of the Venetians, they had a design to make some Conquest themselves in the Mediterranean. The Event justified the Suspicion. A strong Squadron of Men of War, with about 9000 Land Forces, commanded by the Marquis de Lede, sailed from Barcelona the 20th of July 1717, and landing at Cagliari in Sardinia, made a speedy and entire Conquest of that Island, which belonged to the Emperor, and was in no good condition of Defence. The World was surprized, and expected the King of Spain's Reasons for so extraordinary a Procedure. The principal Motives alledged by that Court were, “ their “ Resentment of the unfair Dealings “ of the * Archduke, in the Execution of the Treaty for evacuating “ Catalonia and Majorca, by delivering up the Towns to the Inhabitants; which had put the King of “ Spain to great trouble and expence “ in

* They had not then acknowledged him to be Emperor.

“ in reducing those People to Obedience.” To which was added, “ the Arrest of the Inquisitor General of Spain at Milan, as he was passing through that Country with a Passport from the Pope.” But whatever unfairness (if any) had been practis’d by the Emperor on Occasion of the Evacuation, it was long antecedent to the Promise the King of Spain had made, not to molest the Emperor, whilst he was at War with the Turks. And the detention of a single Subject was too weak a Ground for a Proceeding of such Violence. But, that Prince promising to proceed no farther against the Emperor, and “ to suspend all Operations, in order to give time and opportunity to the Powers of Europe to think of Measures for reconciling their Differences, and securing the Tranquillity and Balance of Power in Italy,” it gave occasion to England and France, who were Guaranties of the Neutrality of Italy, (and the former engaged besides in a defensive Alliance with the Emperor) “ to concert together “ such Terms of Accommodation “ between the Emperor and the “ King of Spain, as should be equally advantageous and honourable to “ both, supply the Imperfections of “ the Treaties of Utrecht and Baden, “ and establish on a more solid Basis the Tranquillity of Europe; with “ a resolution of compelling by Force “ that Party which should refuse to “ accede to those Stipulations, and “ thereby obstruct the general Good.”

This gave Birth to that famous Treaty, called, the Quadruple Alliance, by which the Emperor was to renounce all Pretensions to the Crown of Spain (a point King Philip had exceedingly at heart) and to part with Sardinia to the Duke of Savoy, in lieu of which, the Duke was to surrender render Sicily to the Emperor. The Succession to the Duchies of Tuscany, Parma and Placentia, which the Queen of Spain (of the House of Farnese) claimed by Inheritance, in default of Male Issue, was to be settled on her eldest Son. But Spain being dissatisfied with this Partition, and continuing to make very formidable Preparations by Sea and Land, without any regard to the Entreaties and Admonitions of England and France, the King ordered a strong Squadron of Ships of War to be fitted out for the Sea. The Marquis de Monteleon, Ambassador of Spain at the Court of England, being alarmed at these Preparations, and representing in a Memorial, dated the 18th of March 1718, “ that so powerful “ an Armament, in time of Peace, “ could not but cause Umbrage to “ the King his Master, and alter the “ good Intelligence that reigned be“ tween the two Crowns.” The King answered, “ That it was not his Intention to conceal the Subject of that Armament, and that he designed soon to send Admiral Byng with a powerful Squadron into the Mediterranean Sea; in order to maintain the Neutrality of Italy against those who should seek to disturb it.”

Expedition to SICILY.

7

The Ships being got to their Rendezvous at Spithead, Sir George Byng repaired down to Portsmouth to take them under his Command. The King's Instructions to that Admiral were, * “ upon his Arrival in the Mediterranean, to acquaint the Court of Spain, and likewise the Viceroy of Naples, and the Governor of Milan, that he was sent into that Sea, in order to promote all Measures that might best contribute to the composing the Differences ari-

* See the Appendix.

“ sen between the two Crowns, and “ for preventing any farther Viola“ tion of the Neutrality of Italy, “ which he was to see preserved.
“ That he was to make Instances “ with both Parties to forbear all “ Acts of Hostility, in order to the “ setting on foot and concluding the “ proper Negotiations of Peace. But “ in case the Spaniards should still in“ sist to attack the Emperor's Ter“ ritory in Italy, or to land in any “ part of Italy for that purpose, or “ should endeavour to make them“ selves Masters of the Island of Si- “ cily, which must be with a De“ sign to invade the Kingdom of “ Naples, he was then with all his “ Power to hinder and obstruct the “ same. But if they were already “ landed, he was to endeavour ami“ cably to dissuade them from per“ severing in such an Attempt, and “ to offer them his Assistance to “ with-

“ withdraw their Troops, and put “ an end to all farther Acts of Ho“ stility. But if his friendly Endeavours should prove ineffectual, he “ was then to defend the Territories attacked, by keeping company “ with, or intercepting their Ships or “ Convoys, or (if necessary) by opposing them openly.”

The Admiral sailed the 15th of June, 1718, from Spithead, with twenty Ships of the Line of Battle, two Fireships, two Bomb-Vessels, a Hospital-Ship, and a Store-Ship. Being got into the Ocean, he sent the Rupert to Lisbon for Intelligence, and arriving the 30th off Cape St. Vincent, he dispatched the Superbe to Cadiz, with a Gentleman who carried a Letter from him to * Colonel Stanhope, the King's Envoy at Madrid, wherein he desired that Minister to acquaint the King of Spain with his

* Now Lord Harrington.

Expedition to SICILY.

II

Arrival in those Parts, in his way to the Mediterranean, and to lay before him the Instructions he was to act under with his Squadron, of which he gave a very ample Detail in his Letter. The Envoy shewed the Letter to Cardinal Alberoni, who upon reading it, told him with some Warmth, “ That his Master would “ run all Hazards, and even suffer “ himself to be driven out of Spain, “ rather than recall his Troops, or “ consent to any Suspension of “ Arms:” adding “ That the Spaniards were not to be frightened, “ and he was so well convinced of “ their Fleet’s doing their Duty, that, “ if the Admiral should think fit to “ attack them, he should be in no “ pain for the Success.” Mr. Stanhope having in his Hand a List of the British Squadron, prayed his Eminence to peruse it, and to compare its Strength with that of their own own Squadron, which the Cardinal took, and threw on the Ground with much Passion. Mr. Stanhope, with great Temper, desired him “ to consider the sincere Attention the King his Master had always had to the Honour and Interest of his Catholick Majesty, which it was impossible for him to give greater Proofs of, than he had done by his unwearied Endeavours thro’ the whole course of the present Negotiation, to procure the most advantageous Conditions possible for Spain, in which he had succeeded even beyond what any unprejudiced Person could have hoped for; and that, tho’ by the Treaty of Utrecht for the Neutrality of Italy, which was entered into at the Request of the King of Spain himself, as also by that of Westminster the 25th of May 1716, his Majesty found himself obliged

“ to

“ to defend the Emperor’s Domi“ nions when attacked, he had hi“ therto only acted as a Mediator, “ tho’ ever since the Enterprize against “ Sardinia, by his Treaties he be“ came a Party in the War, and for “ this Year last past had been strong“ ly called upon by the Emperor to “ comply with his Engagements; “ and that even now, when it was “ impossible for him to delay any “ longer the sending his Fleet into “ the Mediterranean, it plainly ap“ peared by the Admiral’s Instruc“ tions, which he communicated to “ his Eminence, and by the Orders “ he had himself received, that his “ Majesty had nothing more at heart, “ than that his Fleet might be em“ ployed in promoting the Interests “ of the King of Spain; and hoped, “ his Catholick Majesty would not,
“ by refusing to recall his Troops, “ or consent to a Cessation of Arms, “ put “ put it out of his Power to give all “ the Proofs of the sincere Friend“ ship he always desired to cultivate “ with his Catholick Majesty.” All that the Cardinal could be brought to promise, was, to lay the Admiral’s Letter before the King, and to let the Envoy know his Resolution upon it in two Days; but it was nine before he could obtain and send it away, the Cardinal probably hoping that the Admiral would delay, in expectation of it, in some of the Ports of Spain, and thereby give time for their Fleet and Forces to secure a good Footing in Sicily. The Answer was wrote under the Admiral’s Letter in these Words, “ His Catho-“ lick Majesty has done me the Ho“ nour to tell me, That the Cheva“ lier Byng may execute the Orders “ which he has from the King his “ Master. Escorial, 15 July, 1718.

“ The Cardinal Alberoni.”

Mr.

Mr. Stanhope seeing things tending to a Rupture, gave private and early Notice of his Apprehensions to the English Consuls and Merchants settled in the Spanish Sea-port Towns, advising them to guard and secure their Effects against any danger of a Breach between the two Crowns.

The Admiral pursuing his Voyage with unfavourable Winds, it was the 8th of July before he made Cape Spartel, where the Superbe and Rupert rejoined him, and brought him Advice of the mighty Preparations the Spaniards had made at Barcelona, and of their Fleet sailing from thence the 18th of June to the Eastward. In passing by Gibraltar, Vice-Admiral Cornwall came out and joined him with the Argyle and Charles Galley. The Squadron wanting Water, and the Wind continuing contrary, they anchored off Cape Malaga, where having compleated their Watering in four

four Days, they proceeded to Minorca, where the Admiral was to land four Regiments of Foot, which he carried out from England, in order to relieve the Soldiers there in Garrison, who were to embark and serve in the Squadron. On the 23^d of July he anchored with the Squadron off Port Mahon. Here he received Advice, that the Spanish Fleet had been seen the 30th of June within forty Leagues of Naples, Steering S. E. upon which he dispatched away Expresses to the Governor of Milan, and Viceroy of Naples, to inform them of his Arrival in the Mediterranean; and having shifted the Garrisons of Minorca, he sailed from thence the 25th of July, and arrived the 1st of August in the Bay of Naples.

It is impossible to express the Joy of those People, at the long wish'd-for Sight of a Fleet, which alone could

could assure their Safety. They had been under the greatest Terrors, expecting that the prodigious Armament of Spain would have fallen upon that Kingdom; and though their Fears were relieved for the present, by the Descent of the Spaniards into Sicily, yet the Rapidity with which they had over-run the greatest part of that Island, and a reasonable Suspicion, that the Duke of Savoy would not much expose his Troops to defend the Remainder of a Country, which, by the Terms of the Quadruple Alliance, was to be taken from him, and given to a Potentate whose Power in Italy he dreaded, made them look for the Enemy soon in Naples, where, the strong Party that had appeared amongst the Sicilian Nobility for Spain, made them apprehend, that no less a Faction would rise in their Favour, upon their invading that Kingdom, where the Germans had but Twelve (some say Eight) thousand Men, and the whole Country was ill provided for Defence. The common People indeed were generally in the Interest of the House of Austria, which was greatly owing to the prudent Government of the Marshal Count Dawn their Viceroy, a Man endowed with all the Qualities fit for that high Employment, and the same Person who defended Turin so well, when it was besieged by the 'Duke of Orleans in 1706, 'till it was relieved by the Duke of Savoy and Prince Eugene. He was of a courteous and affable Disposition, but exact and steady in the Administration of Justice, by which means he had suppress'd the Banditti who used to infest the Country; and had put a stop to the Murthers that were so frequent in the City, not suffering the Churches to exercise their infamous Claim Claim of Sanctuary for such flagitious Crimes. He did not indeed affect that Shew of Grandeur which the Italians are fond of; but as his frugal manner of living freed him from the Necessity of oppressing them, so there was never any Complaint of that kind against him. He was very zealous for the Interests of his Master, which he promoted by just and wise Measures; and a certain Conformity of Manners, wherein he and the Admiral resembled each other, begat such a quick Confidence and Friendship between them, as helped to carry on the Service of the common Cause with unusual Harmony and Dispatch.

The Fleet sailing with a gentle Gale into the Bay of Naples, consisting of Twenty-one Sail of the Line of Battle, most of them great Ships, and three of them bearing Flags, afforded such a Spectacle as had never been seen in those Parts before. The whole City was in a Tumult of Joy and Exultation. The Shore was crowded with Multitudes of Coaches and People; and such an infinite number of Boats came off, some with Provisions and Refreshments, others out of Curiosity and Admiration, that the Sea between the Fleet at Anchor and the Shore, was literally covered.

The Viceroy being incommoded with the Gout, sent Colonel Count Hamilton to make his Compliments to the Admiral, and to let him know the feeble Condition he was in, but that nevertheless he intended to come off, and make him a Visit. The Admiral returned the Civility by his First Captain, who waiting on the Viceroy, told him, the Admiral was sensible of the Honour he intended him, but desired he would not give himself the trouble, especially cially as he was ill, and that he would immediately wait on his Excellency. The Admiral going ashore, attended by the Flag-Officers and Captains in their Boats, was saluted, at his Landing, by all the Cannon round the City and Castles, and was carried to the Duke De Matalone's Palace, pleasantly situated by the Seaside, which had been prepared for his Reception during his Stay at Naples. From thence he was conducted to Court through an infinite Throng of People, with the greatest Acclamations of Joy, and all the Honours and Ceremonies paid to a Viceroy; where entering into Conference with Count Dawn, he learnt that the Spanish Army, consisting of about 30000 Men, commanded by the Marquis De Lede, had landed the 2d of July in Sicily, and had soon made themselves Masters of the City and Castles of Palermo, and of great part of the Island; that they had taken the Town of Messina, and were then carrying on the Siege of the Citadel; that the Viceroy did not know, how far the Piedmontese Garrison was to be depended on, but that they must soon be obliged to surrender, if not relieved. That the last Letters he had received from Vienna gave hopes, that the King of Sicily might be entered by this time into a particular Alliance with the Emperor, having desired the Assistance of his Troops, and agreed to receive them into the Citadel. The next Morning the Viceroy visited the Admiral, and renewing their Conference on the Measures to be taken in that Conjunction of Affairs, it was agreed, that the Viceroy should send General Wetzel with 2000 German Foot in Tartans to Messina, to relieve the Citadel, and Fort St. Salvador; and, as the Admiral was directed rected by his Orders to obstruct any Attempts of the Spaniards on Sicily, he consented to take those Troops under his Protection; and accordingly, the Transports being got ready, he sailed with them the 6th of August from Naples, and arrived the 9th in view of the Fare of Messina.

Here the Admiral paused. He saw with trouble a new War rekindled in Europe by the Ambition of Spain. He weighed with Thoughtfulness the Consequences of his Instructions, which made a Rupture with that Nation unavoidable, if they persisted in their Enterprize on Sicily; and being ardently desirous of trying every Method of Negotiation, before he proceeded to the Extremity of his Orders, he dispatched away Captain Saunders, his First Captain, to Messina, with a Letter to the Marquis De Lede, acquainting him, "that " the King his Master being en“ gaged by several Treaties to pre“ serve the Tranquillity of Italy, had “ honoured him with the Command “ of a Squadron of Ships, which he “ had sent into those Seas, and that “ he came fully empowered and in“ structed to promote such Measures “ as might best accommodate all “ Differences between the Powers “ concerned. That his Majesty was “ employing his utmost Endeavours “ to bring about a general Pacifica“ tion, and was not without hopes “ of Success; he therefore proposed “ to him to come to a Cessation of “ Arms in Sicily for two Months, “ in order to give time to the seve“ ral Courts to conclude on such “ Resolutions as might restore a last“ ing Peace.” But added, “ that if “ he was not so happy to succeed in “ this Offer of his Service, nor to “ be instrumental in bringing about “ so desirable a Work, he should “ then

“ then hope to merit his Excellen-“ cy’s Esteem in the Execution of “ the other part of his Orders, which “ were, to use all his Force to pre“ vent farther Attempts to disturb “ the Dominions his Master stood “ engaged to defend.” The next Morning the Captain returned with the General’s Answer, “ that it would “ be an inexpressible Joy for his Per“ son to contribute to so laudable an “ End as Peace, but as he had no “ Powers to treat, he could not of “ Consequence agree to any Suspen“ sion of Arms, even at the Expence “ of what the Courage of his Master’s “ Arms might be put to, but should “ follow his Orders, which directed “ him to seize on Sicily for his Mas“ ter the King of Spain. That he “ had a true Sense of his accomplish“ ed Expressions, but his Master’s “ Forces would always be universal“ ly

“ ly esteemed in sacrificing them“ selves for the Preservation of their “ Credit, in which Cases the Suc“ cess did not always answer the I“ deas that were formed.”

The Admiral had received Intelligence, that the Spanish Fleet weighed from Paradise (which is a Road at the Entrance of the Harbour of Messina) the day before his Arrival off the Fare, which made him Conclude, that they were retired to Malta; and therefore, upon receiving the Marquis's Answer, he immediately weighed, with an Intention to come with his Squadron before Messina, in order to encourage and support the Garrison in the Citadel; but as he stood in about the Point of the Fare towards Messina, he saw two of the Spanish Scouts in the Fare, and being informed at the same time by a Felucca, which came off from the Calabrian Shore, that they saw from the Hills the Spanish nish Fleet lying by, the Admiral altered his Design, and sending away general Wetzel with the German Troops to Reggio, under the Convoy of two Men of War, he stood through the Fare with his Squadron, with all the Sail he could, after their Scouts, imagining they would lead him to their Fleet, which accordingly they did; for before Noon he had a fair Sight of their whole Fleet lying by, and drawn into a Line of Battle, consisting of 27 Sail of Men of War, small and great, besides two Fire-ships, four Bomb-Vessels, seven Gallies, and several Ships laden with Stores and Provisions, commanded by the Admiral Don Antonio de Castaneta, and under him four Rear-Admirals, Chacon, Mari, Guevara and Cammock. On the Sight of the English Squadron, they stood away large, but in order of Battle. The Admiral followed them all the rest of that day, day, and the succeeding Night, with small Gales NEtly and sometimes Calm, with fair Weather. The next Morning early (the 11th) the English being got pretty near up with them, the Marquis de Mari, Rear-Admiral, with six Spanish Men of War, and all the Gallies, Fireships, Bomb-Vessels and Storeships, separated from their main Fleet, and stood in for the Sicilian Shore, upon which the Admiral detached Captain Walton of the Canterbury with five more Ships after them, and the Argyle and Canterbury getting within Gun Shot of the headmost Ship about six in the Morning, the Argyle fired a Shot to bring her to, which she not minding, the Argyle fired another, and the Canterbury being something nearer, fired another, upon which the Spanish Ship fired her stern Chace at the Canterbury, and then the Engagement began. The Admiral pursuing ing

ing the main Body of the Spanish Fleet, the Orford, Captain Falkingham, and the Grafton, Captain Haddock, came up first with them, about ten of the Clock, at whom the Spaniards fired their stern Chace Guns. The Admiral sent Orders to those two Ships not to fire, unless the Spaniards repeated their firing, which they doing, the Orford attacked the Santa Rosa of 64 Guns, and took her. The St. Carlos of 60 Guns struck next, without much Opposition, to the Kent, Captain Matthews. The Grafton attacked warmly the Prince of Asturias of 70 Guns, formerly called the Cumberland, in which was Rear-Admiral Chacon, but the Bredah and Captain coming up, Captain Haddock left that Ship much shattered for them to take, and stretched a head after another Ship of 60 Guns, which had kept firing on his Star-board Bow, during his Engagement with the Prince of Asturias. About one of the Clock the Kent, and soon after the Superbe, Captain Master, came up with and engaged the Spanish Admiral of 74 Guns, who with two Ships more fired on them and made a running Fight until about three, and then the Kent bearing down upon him, and under his Stern, gave him her Broadside, and fell to *Lee*ward; afterwards the Superbe putting for it to lay the Admiral aboard, fell on his Weather Quarter, upon which the Spanish Admiral shifting his Helm, the Superbe ranged up under his Lee Quarter, on which he struck to her. At the same time the Barfleur, in which was the Admiral, being a-stern of the Spanish Admiral within Shot, and inclining on his Weather Quarter, Rear-Admiral Guevara and another 60 Gun Ship, which were to Windward, bore down upon him, and gave him their Broad-sides, sides, and then clapt upon a Wind, standing in for the Land: The Admiral immediately tacked and stood after them, until it was almost Night, but it being little Wind, and they galing away out of his Reach, he left pursuing them, and stood in to the Fleet, which he joined two hours after Night. The Essex took the Juno of 36 Guns, the Montague and Rupert took the Volante of 44 Guns, and Rear-Admiral Delaval, in the Dorsetshire, took the Isabella of 60 Guns. This Action happened off Cape Passaro, at about six Leagues distance from the Shore. The English received but little damage. The Ship that suffered most was the Grafton, which being a good Sailor, her Captain engaged several Ships of the Enemy, always pursuing the Headmost, and leaving those Ships he had disabled or damaged, to be taken by those that followed him.
with

him. The Admiral lay by some days at Sea, to refit the Rigging of his Ships, and to repair the Damages the Prizes had sustained; and the 18th received a Letter from Captain Walton * giving an Account, that he had taken four Spanish Men of War, one of 60 Guns, commanded by Rear-Admiral Mari, one of 54, one of 40, and one of 24 Guns, with a Bomb-Vessel, and a Ship laden with Arms; and burnt four Men of War, one of 54 Guns, two of 40, and one of 30 Guns, with a Fireship and a Bomb-Vessel.

The Captain was one, whose natural Talents were fitter for achieving a gallant Action, than describing one, yet his Letter on this Occasion, carries in it such a Strain of military Eloquence, that it is worth inserting here.

* He was knighted for this Action, and made a Flag-Officer some time after.

S I R,

SIR,

We have taken and destroyed all the Spanish Ships and Vessels, which were upon the Coast, the Number as per Margin. I am, &c.

Canterbury off

Syracusa, 16th August, G. WALTON.

1718.

The Admiral having thus received a full Account of the whole Transaction, dispatched away his eldest Son Mr. Byng to England; who arriving at Hampton-Court in fifteen days from Naples, brought thither the agreeable Confirmation of what publick Fame had before reported, and upon which the King had already written a * Letter to the Admiral with his own hand. Mr. Byng met with a most gracious Reception from his Majesty, who made him a handsome Present, and sent him back. with plenipotentiary Powers to his Father to negotiate with the several Princes and States of Italy as there should be Occasion, and with his royal Grant to the Officers and Seamen of all Prizes taken by them from the Spaniards.

* See Appendix.

The Conduct of the Spaniards in the Action of Passaro, did not answer the Vigor of the Resolutions they had taken before it. Upon Notice of the Approach of the English Squadron, they held a Consultation, in which the Question was not, whether they should fight or retreat, but in what Station they should expect them? Whether go out from Messina to meet them, or pass through the Fare to the Southward, and lying by in order of Battle, receive them there? Which latter Opinion prevailed. But when the Admiral came up near to them, they soon abandoned their Order of Battle, and falling into Confusion and Incertainty, whether to resist or fly, by doing neither, they became an easy easy Prey, and the English might be rather said to have made a Seizure, than to have gotten a Victory. There was indeed some Disproportion in the Strength of the two Fleets, a List of both which is in the Appendix: But the Inequality was not such as deterred the Spaniards from a resolution of fighting, tho' it was but ill-supported afterwards in the Execution. But this Justice is due to the Admiral Castaneta, and to Rear-Admiral Chacon, that they made as good a Defence with their own Ships as could be expected, and the former was wounded in both Legs.

It was reported, that at a Consultation of the Spanish Admirals, Rear-Admiral Cammock gave his Opinion, that they should remain at Anchor in the Road of Paradise, ranging their Ships in a Line of Battle, with their Broadfides to the Sea; which Measure would certainly have given the Engliſh Admiral infinite Trouble to attack them. For the Coaſt there is ſo bold, that their biggeſt Ships could ride with a Cable aſhore; and farther out the Currents are ſo various and rapid, that it would have been hardly practicable to get up to them, but impoſſible to anchor or lye by them in Order of Battle: Beſides, they lay ſo near the Shore, and could have received ſuch Aſſiſtance of Soldiers from the Army to man and defend them; and the Annoyance the Spaniards might have given from the ſeveral Batteries they could have planted along the Shore, would have been ſuch, that the only way of attacking the Ships ſeemed to be by boarding and grappling with them at once, to prevent being caſt off by the Currents, which would have been a very hazardous Undertaking, wherein the Spaniards would have had many Advantages, and the Engliſh Admiral miral have run the Chance of destroying his Fleet, or buying a Victory, if he succeeded, very dear.

The Councils of Spain were at this time under the Management of two Italians, the Queen and the Abbot Alberoni, whom she had raised to the Dignity of Cardinal and Prime Minister. They had vast Designs in their View, and by secret Intrigues with the King of Sicily, and other Italian Princes and States, had laid no less a Scheme, than to exterminate the House of Austria and the Imperial Power out of Italy. And it was thought to be owing to the doubts they had of the Sincerity of the King of Sicily, that the Storm fell first upon his Dominions, which was intended elsewhere. The Armament they fitted out was suitable to the Greatness of the Undertaking; never any Nation sent to Sea an Army so numerous, so well appointed, and so provided with all Neccessaries for a distant Expedition; the least Implement was not forgotten. All which was owing to the indefatigable Care of Don Joseph Patinho, a Man of great Abilities, who went in the Expedition, and had the absolute Direction and Management of the whole Enterprize, except the military Command. The World was amazed to see Spain exerting a Vigor, she had not shewn for above a Century past. Some of the principal Prisoners, and Castaneta himself, assured the Admiral, that they intended the Summer following to have at Sea 50 Sail of the Line of Battle; which the great Preparations in the Ports of Biscay, and other Ports of Spain, made very probable. Those in Biscay, which were one Man of War of 70 Guns, and two of 60, newly built, with an incredible Quantity of Timber, Pitch and Tar, and other

D ;

and

other naval Stores, for building more, were all destroyed by an English Squadron, assisted by a Detachment which the Duke of Berwick spared from his Army, at the Solicitation of Colonel Stanhope the English Minister, who contrived the Design, and serving as a Voluntier in the Enterprize, principally contributed to the Execution of it.

It should seem but ill Policy in a Court, intent on such mighty Designs, to provoke and irritate, without Cause, a Nation the most capable in the World of thwarting and defeating them. And yet they seemed to make it a studied Point to vex and distress the English by all manner of Ways in their Commerce, inso-much that their Trade with Spain was almost ruined and lost. They demanded Arbitrary and heavy Duties from the English Factories residing in their Ports, from which the Treaties expressly exempted them; and upon refusal of Payment, their Houses were surrounded by Soldiers, their Warehouses and Chests broken open, and their Goods sold at publick Outcry. The royal Officers used them with such Injustice and Insolence, as if they knew, they made their Court by doing so. Every Post brought Complaints to the English Minister at Madrid, of new Grievances and Oppressions. The Memorials delivered to that Court for Redress were numberless, without the least Regard had to them. When any Transportation of Troops was intended, they immediately Embargoed all the English Merchant Ships in their Ports, compelling their Masters, with great Circumstances of Severity, to enter into their Service, imprisoning them in common Goals, if they refused, and obliging them to unload their Cargoes, tho' perishable, and consigned

signed to other Markets. They proceeded so far in their unjust Treatment, that their Cruizers brought into the Ports of Spain whatever English Merchant-Ships they met with in the open Sea, tho' bound to Italy, or other Parts, and compelled them to unload their Cargoes, and enter into their Service. Such as were not used by them for Transports, had their Seamen taken away to serve in their Men of War. Rear-Admiral Cammock press'd no less than Sixty for his own Ship, and one of the Masters endeavouring to keep his Men, had both his Ears cut off. The Battle of Passaro was fortunate to those poor People, for when the Issue of it, was known, 45 English Transports made their Escape from Messina to Reggio, several of them laden with Military Stores and Provisions; and their Masters applying to the Admiral, he granted granted them Convoy to the Ports in Italy where they desired to go; but some chose to stay and enter into the Emperor's Service, to transport his Troops from Genoa and Naples to Sicily.

We left the Admiral at Sea, gathering together his Ships, which having done, he put into Syracusa the 19th, where he found Captain Walton and his Prizes. Syracusa was at that time blocked up by a Detachment of the Spanish Army, into which City Count Maffei, the Duke of Savoy's Viceroy, had retreated with difficulty from Palermo, and had in the Place a numerous Garrison. But the first and principal Point of the Spanish General was to get Messina into his Hands, as the safest Port for their Fleet, and the most proper Place to facilitate and secure the Conquest of the rest of the Island, and from whence they designed signed to transport their numerous Horse, and the greatest part of their Foot, over to Calabria, and to have carried the War into the Kingdom of Naples. The Citadel of Messina was defended by a Piedmontese Garrison, commanded by the Marquis D'Andorno; but the Duke of Savoy being unable to withstand the Siege, had solicited the Emperor for his Assistance, and a Convention was made between the Viceroy of Naples and the Count De Bourgue, Resident of Savoy, whereby the former was to send a Detachment of German Troops, to be admitted into the Citadel on joint and equal Terms of Command; for which Service Baron Wetzel was dispatched away with 2000 Foot, as has been before related. But the Success of the British Fleet had raised such a Confidence in the Garrison of their Security against any Attempts from the Spaniards niards, that the Resident endeavoured to elude an Agreement, the Necessity of which he thought no longer subsisted, pretending want of Power to make such a Concession without an Equivalent, but that he would write to his Court for farther Orders. This coming to the Admiral's Knowledge, he represented in strong Terms to Count Maffei, " the " Unfairness of such a Proceeding,

" and how contrary it was to what " he himself had agreed to in their " Conference together the Day before upon that Subject. That " such a Disagreement, at a time " that the Citadel was so vigorously " attacked by the Enemy, might be " a means of their taking it, which " the Reputation of the English
" Fleet would not suffer him to be " an idle Spectator of; and therefore, if he was resolved to stay " till he had Instructions from the " Court

“ Court of Turin, he should like“ wise send to his Court for farther “ Orders; and in the mean time, “ would retire from the Island to “ some other Place, to refresh his “ Men, and refit his Ships, till he “ should receive new Directions from “ England.” This had such an Effect upon the Viceroy, that he gave immediate Orders for putting the Agreement in Execution, and for admitting German Troops into the Citadel. This Point being adjusted, the Admiral (having sent away Vice-Admiral Cornwall with such of his Ships as wanted refitting, and all the Prizes, to Port-Mahon, with Orders not to suffer the least Embezzlement to be made, but to preserve every thing entire, till his Majesty’s Pleasure should be known) sailed himself the 23^d of August from Syracusa, and arrived the 26th at Reggio, where General Wetzel informing him, that he

he hourly expected a Reinforcement of 4000 Men from Naples, which, with those he had with him, and the Garrison in the Citadel, would make about 9000 Men, and, upon their Arrival, he should form a Project for raising the Siege of the Citadel, if the Admiral would stay to countenance and protect him with his Fleet; he readily consented thereto, knowing the extreme Importance of not letting Messina fall into the Hands of the Enemy, and being directed by fresh Orders from England to do all he could to prevent it. But those Forces proving not sufficient for the Execution of the intended Project, the General contented himself with supplying the Citadel from time to time with fresh Troops from Reggio; notwithstanding which, the Spaniards pushed on the Siege with so much Vigor and Success, that the Governor surrendered the the Citadel by Capitulation on the 29th of September to the great Surprise and Dissatisfaction of the Germans. The Piedmontese part of the Garrison was transported by Sea to Syracusa, and the Germans to Reggio.

The Admiral receiving Advice, that Rear-Admiral Cammock with three Spanish Men of War, and as many Frigates, which had escaped from the Battle, was at Malta; and that a rich English Merchant-ship homeward bound from Turkey, was detained in that Port, and in some danger; as likewise five Sicilian Gallies, which had taken Refuge there ever since the Arrival of the Spanish Fleet in Sicily; he stood over to that Island, where he learnt, that Rear-Admiral Cammock had sailed from thence five Days before, with four Ships which he had cleaned there. The Marquis De Rivaroles, General of the Sicilian Gallies, coming off to the Admiral, made great Complaints of the Partiality and ill Usage of that Government, in suffering him to be exposed to daily Affronts from the Spaniards, and prayed his Protection and Assistance to get away from thence, upon which the Admiral sent his First Captain with his Compliments to the Grand Master, and desired, that those Gallies might have free Liberty to come out to him. The Grand Master sent off three great Crosses of the Order to the Admiral, who with much Politeness gave him all the Assurances possible of the Freedom of the Gallies to do what they pleased, upon which he sent word to the Marquis to come out. But he returning answer, That the Spanish Ships had laid themselves in the way to stop his Passage, and threatned to sink him, if he offered to stir, the Admiral sent to the Grand Master a second Mes-

to

Message, That if he suffered the Neutrality of the Port to be violated, or any ill Treatment to be given to the Gallies, he should take the Measures that would be necessary on that occasion; but the Grand Master protesting, that no Violence should be used, and that he would be answerable for it, the Admiral sent again to the Marquis to come out, assuring him, that if the Spaniards offered the least Obstruction, he would assist him to destroy them in the very Port; but the Marquis continuing under great Perplexity and Terror, the Admiral, tired with his Delay, sent him word, that he was well satisfied of the Honour of the Grand Master in preserving the Privilege of the Port, and therefore, if he would not make use of the present Opportunity, he should suspect that his Fears were affected, and used only as an Artifice to stay there, and would give himself no farther trouble about him; and accordingly weighed, in order to depart, but this Message wrought so upon the Marquis, that he immediately hastned out with his Gallies, without any Obstruction from the Spaniards; but they were in so miserable a Condition, that the Admiral was forced to lend them Seamen and Pilots to navigate them, and Caulkers to stop their Leaks. The Turkey Ship came out likewise, and joined the Admiral, who sent the Gallies under a Convoy to Syracusa, and having seen the Turkey Merchant-Ship clear of Danger, he arrived the 2d of November in the Bay of Naples, from whence he sent Rear-Admiral Delarval with two 80 Gun Ships, and a Fire-Ship, home to England. Here the Count De Luzan, Son-in-law to the Marquis De Rialp, Secretary of State at Vienna, brought

E would

the

the Admiral a gracious Letter from the Emperor, written with his own Hand, * and his Picture set round with large brilliant Diamonds.

The taking of Messina was a Point of great Consequence, as it made the Spaniards Masters of all Sicily, except Syracusa, Trapani, and Melazzo (where the Duke of Savoy had still Garrisons) and as it deprived the English Fleet of a Port to winter in, there being no other good Harbour in those Parts. The Emperor saw before him a difficult Task to get Possession of an Island, which the Quadruple Alliance had given him. The Duke of Savoy had only the three aforementioned Towns to deliver up, which he scrupled doing without the promised Equivalent, and the Emperor had it not to give him. But tho' the Emperor had gotten those Places, the Recovery of the rest of the Island was to be a Work of Conquest. The Spaniards had an Army well appointed, well paid, and the Affections of the People on their side. They would have little feared any Enterprizes of the Germans, if the Sea had been neutral between them.

* See Appendix.

The Duke of Savoy finding himself under Circumstances of Difficulty, the Spaniards on the one hand taking most of his Towns in Sicily from him, and the Emperor on the other, by virtue of the Quadruple Alliance, demanding his Evacuation of the rest, whilst the Island of Sardinia, allotted to him by the same Treaty, remained in the Hands of the Enemy; and having Jealousy, that when the Imperialists had obtained their Island, he should be left to get the other as he could, and desiring, to have some reasonable Security curity for the one, before he parted with his Interest in the other, a Convention was made between those Princes at Vienna (Monsieur De St. Saphorin the King's Minister assisting) dated 29th December 1718, whereby it was agreed to form an Army for an Expedition to Sardinia as soon as possible, towards which the Emperor was to furnish 6500 Foot, and 600 Horse, at his own Expence, and the Duke of Savoy was entirely to evacuate Sicily, and join 5000 Men of his Troops from that Island to act with the Imperialists on that Service; and in the mean time, till they could be transported from Sicily, they were to co-operate with the Germans against the common Enemy. This Treaty of Convention was sent to Naples, for the Viceroy, the Duke of Savoy's Minister, and the Admiral, to consult together of the best means to put it in Execution. The Business hung long perplexed with Difficulties on the part of the Minister of Savoy, from a Jealousy and Distrust of the Germans, but the Admiral interposing, and removing by degrees all Scruples, an Agreement was at last concluded and signed between them, upon which the Minister of Savoy delivered to the Viceroy his Master's Orders to Count Maffei to evacuate the Towns in his Possession to the Imperialists. But the Expedition against Sardinia did not go on, as will be shewn anon.

The Winter being now set in, the Viceroy and Admiral held frequent Consultations together, about the farther Operations against the Enemy. It was judged absolutely necessary to maintain the Post of Melazzo, which had been long blockaded, and was now besieged by the Spanish Army, both sides making this their principal Point during the Winter, the one to hold their Footing in the Island by means of this Place; the other, by taking it, to shut them out. All the Troops from Reggio, and some Horse from Naples, being got into the Town under the Command of the Generals Caraffa and Veterani, it was resolved in a Council of War held the 14th of October, to sally out upon the Enemy. Accordingly the next Morning by break of Day, they marched out in two Columns, the first consisting of six, and the other of five Battalions, and attacked the Spanish Entrenchments, which they carried after an Engagement of four Hours, and got possession of their Camp in the Center and on the left, with three Pieces of Cannon. But the Soldiers falling to plunder, the Spaniards rallied on their right, and the Marquis De Lede coming up at the same time with fresh Troops from Messina, which had lain short the Night before, they attacked the Germans in their Turn, and drove them back into their Camp under the Walls of the Town, whose Artillery protected their Retreat, and prevented a greater Slaughter. In this Action about 1200 Men were killed or wounded on each Side, and General Veterani was taken.

Melazzo is an ill fortified Town, on the North Side of the Island of Sicily, not far distant from the Fare, standing on a Neck of Land which runs out into the Sea like an Isthmus. Caraffa being recalled to Naples, Baron Zumjungen arrived at Melazzo the 27th of November, to command the Forces; And being followed by the Generals Wachtendonck and Seckendorf, with large Supplies of Troops from Italy, and the place being too strait to contain them, they carried their Entrenchments out of the Town, within less than Pistol Shot of those of the Spaniards, so that neither Side being able to advance farther, both lay all the Winter in an unwholsome Situation, it being low bad Ground, and the Trenches filled with Water in rainy, and by the Sea in blowing Weather, so that great Numbers of Men perished on both Sides. The Germans had no Provisions but what came from time to time in small Embarcations from Calabria, and other Ports of Naples. Rear-Admiral Cammock, who was got with his Squadron into Messina, and the Inhabitants of the Island of Lipari, who are esteemed bold Mariners, and have many armed Vessels, lay in the way of intercepting those Supplies, and the least disappointment must have starved the Garrison, for their Consumption was very great, and they had no Magazines. It was very hard Service, unknown and astonishing to the Pilots of that Country, to employ Ships
of

Ships cruizing in those dangerous Seas, during the Rigor of the Winter Season. For, when the Westerly or Northerly Winds blow, there is so little Sea-room in that narrow Station, and the Currents set in so strong upon the Calabrian Shore, accompanied with a vast rolling Sea, that it is extremely difficult for Ships to work to Windward, or indeed to hold their own, and avoid stranding on a Lee Shore. The Admiral had appointed a Squadron under the Command of Captain Walton, to cruize upon this Station, to hinder Rear-Admiral Cammock from coming out of the Fare, and to secure the Passage of the Vessels with Provisions for the German Camp. It chanced to prove such tempestuous Weather, that no Provisions had arrived in a Month at Melazzo, and Captain Walton was blown off from his Station, and had not been seen or heard of in six and twenty twenty days. Rear-Admiral Cammock took hold of this Opportunity to get out of Messina the Moment that the Weather abated, and appearing before Tropea with English Colours, sent a Letter ashore to the Governor, under a fictitious Name of one of the English Captains, acquainting him, that he was come there by Admiral Byng's Orders, to convoy the Embarcations with Provisions to Melazzo, and pressed him to dispatch them away, the Place being in the utmost distress. Had this Stratagem succeeded, it would have entirely ruined the Emperor's Affairs in Sicily; but the Governor happening to be a wary Man, and observing the Letter to be written on Genoa Paper, from that single Circumstance, conceived a Suspicion, which made him refuse to send the Embarcations out to him. In the mean time, the Admiral being made sensible of the Extremities

the

the Germans were reduced to, had no other way left, than to fill four Men of War (just arrived at Naples from Portmahon) with Provisions, directing their Captains to attempt at all hazards to get to Melazzo, which three of them did with much difficulty and danger, (the 4th being disabled by bad Weather) and came providentially to the Relief of the Garrison at a time they must otherwise have surrendered to the Enemy, or perished by Famine. A few days after, Captain Walton recovered his Station, upon the Sight of whom Rear-Admiral Cammock retired into Messina.

Melazzo being rescued from Danger, and reinforced daily with fresh Supplies of Men and Provisions, the Spaniards despairing to take the Place, turned the Siege into a Blockade, and worked hard in fortifying their own Entrenchments, in order to keep the Germans pent up in the Town, and obstruct obstruct the Descent of the Army expected in the Spring.

The Admiral having made a proper Disposition of Ships in different Stations round the Island, to keep the Sea open to the Germans, and shut to the Spaniards, was preparing to depart with the rest that had suffered by bad Weather, to refit at Portmahon, when the Viceroy entreated him to assist at a Conference to be held at the Palace, where he met the Generals Caraffa, Wetzel, and the Marquis de Fuencalada, General of the Neapolitan Gallies. The Viceroy opened it by acquainting them, “ that a Truce with the Turks being “ concluded, Prince Eugene was sending from Hungary a body of about “ 6000 Horse, and 10000 Foot, “ which added to the Troops in Me- “ lazzo, was thought a sufficient “ Number for the Conquest of the “ Island : That they would proba“ bly

“ bly arrive at Naples in the begin“ ning of March, and he should be “ glad to know their Sentiments of “ the properest Place for their land“ ing in Sicily, and touched on se“ veral Propositions about it, as at “ Syracusa or Taormina, on the East “ Side of the Island, or at Patti on “ the North Side, not far Westward “ from Melazzo.” General Caraffa objected to the landing at Syracusa, “ as it would be a means of prolong“ ing the War; that the Place was “ too distant from the Enemy, and “ Augusta and Catania lying in their “ way, the Siege of those Places “ would cost more Time and Men “ than could be spared, besides the “ garrisoning them afterwards. That “ their March from thence to the “ Enemy lay for the most part over “ barren Mountains, amongst a dis“ affected People, where they should “ find no Subsistence but what they “ carried “ carried with them ; and the pas“ sing afterwards through narrow “ Defilez into the Plain of Melazzo, “ where the Enemy lay, was to at“ tack them at too great a disadvan“ tage: and therefore he concluded “ for seeking the Enemy as soon as “ possible, and for that End to land “ as near to them as might be. Ge“ neral Wetzel being next to speak, “ preferred the landing at Syracusa, “ as it would be a work of Ease and “ Safety, and done without Inter“ ruption ; that it would probably “ draw some of the Enemy’s Force “ that way, and so relieve the Troops “ in Melazzo ; that it would expose “ the Army too much to land in “ the Neighbourhood of the Ene“ my, who seeing them approach“ ing from the Sea, would easily “ guess at the Place they designed to “ land at, and leaving a Guard in “ their Camp, march a sufficient Bo“ dy

“ dy of Troops to oppose the De“ scent, which was a difficult and “ tedious Work in it self, especially “ with regard to the debarking the “ Horse.” Caraffa asking him, how long he thought the Enemy might be marching to the landing Place, after they knew where it would be, and Wetzel allowing eight hours, Caraffa reply’d, the Foot could be all landed in that time, and formed into proper Order to receive the Enemy, and the landing the Horse might be afterwards a work of leisure. But Wetzel adhered to his Opinion. The General of the Gallies next, in a very long discourse, “ excused himself “ from giving any Opinion upon a “ Subject that related to the Land “ Service, and referring himself to “ what the two Generals had said be“ fore him, concluded, that great “ Caution ought to be taken, which “ ever Opinion should be followed.”

The

The Admiral gathering from their Discourse, that part of the expected Troops were to embark at Fiume and Trieste, and to come round by Sea to Reggio, and probably pass on thro' the Fare to Naples, told them, “ that “ Land Forces should be trusted to “ the Sea as little as possible, espe“ cially in that early and uncertain “ Season ; that if they landed at “ Manfredonia on the Adriatick Side, “ the Traject would be short, and “ their March more certain to their “ Rendezvous at Naples.” He then “ went on to deliver his Opinion, “ That the Troops they expected “ were not sufficient to recover the “ Island from the Enemy. That it “ was a great Error to hold the Spa- “ niards in Contempt, whose beha“ viour hitherto in Sicily had given no “ reason for it: That they were be“ come used to Arms and Hardships; “ and the Germans would find them like F “ other

“ other Men. That, according to “ a Calculation he had made, when “ those Troops should be joined to “ the Forces in Melazzo, they would “ not be able, after leaving the ne“ cessary Garrisons in the Towns “ which the Duke of Savoy was to “ deliver up, to bring into the Field “ a greater Number than what the “ Spanish Army was reported to be ;
“ and that without a considerable “ Superiority, little Success was to “ be expected in a Country, where “ the Illwill of the People towards “ them, and their Inclinations to the “ Spaniards were so very evident, “ that they were to hope for no As“ sistance, but expect every distress “ from them.” He added, “ that “ they were not to look upon the “ Enemy as a mouldering Army, “ for notwithstanding all the Care “ of his Cruizers, they received fre“ quent Recruits from Spain and “ Sardinia,

“ Sardinia, and even from Italy, in “ open Vessels and Boats, which “ was not always in his Power to “ prevent. And besides, the Mar- “ quis de Lede had lately raised four “ Regiments of Foot, and one of “ Horse in the Island it self.” The Viceroy acknowledged the Force of his Reasoning, but lamented the distance of the Court of Vienna, which hindered them from seeing into and considering enough these difficulties, and who pursued only one Maxim, that if they sent Men, they ought to conquer. The Admiral proposed, that an Officer should be sent to Vienna, to represent the Posture of Affairs to that Court in a better light than they seemed to view them in, and to bring back their final Resolutions concerning the Operations of the War; and Count Ha- milton was pitched upon for that Purpose.

The Conference being ended, the Admiral took his leave of the Viceroy, and set sail the 3^d of February for Portmahon, to refit his Ships, and put them in a Condition to go on early with the Operations of the Campaign, leaving his eldest Son at Naples to manage his Correspondence with the Viceroy, and to inform the Court of England of all Occurrences in those Parts.

Captain Mathews being left with a Squadron at Pentemelia, to observe Rear-Admiral Cammock, and hinder his escaping out of Messina to the Southward, had the good fortune to run one of them ashore, a Ship of 64 Guns, called the S^{ra} Roselia; and another called the St. Pedro of 60 Guns was cast away in Tarento Bay. Cammock himself endeavouring to get away to Spain in a small Frigate of 22 Guns, was chased the 6th February by a Ship of Captain Mathews's Squadron, dron, and escaped with much difficulty in his Boat to Catania, but the Frigate was taken, with all his Effects and Papers, amongst which was a Commission from the Pretender, appointing him Admiral of the white Squadron.

This unhappy Man was a Native of Ireland, and being bred up at Sea, had raised himself to the Post of a Captain, and served in Queen Anne's War, with no bad Character. But associating himself with those who were Enemies to the House of Hanover, and becoming obnoxious to the Government, on the Accession of that Family to the Crown he abandoned his Country, and entered into the Service of Spain, where he was promoted to the Rank of a Rear-Admiral, and served in that Post in the Expedition against Sicily. He had never been noted to want Courage, but in the Action of Passaro, he ran away among the first, and escaped to Malta, affording an Instance, how much a Consciouſness of Guilt and Dread of Punishment depresses the Heart, more than the Fear of an Enemy. He was a vain boasting Man, with a roving unsettled Head, filled with airy Schemes and Projects, without any Judgement or Discretion. He assured Signor Patinho, that he could put most of the English Fleet into his Hands, in recompence for that which he had lost; and in that senseless Confidence, wrote a Letter to the Admiral, to let him know, that he had the Pretender's Commands to assure him, if he would bring over the greatest part of his Fleet to Messina, or to any Port in Spain, he would create him Duke of Albermarle, with a Royal Bounty of one hundred thousand Pounds to support the Honour and Dignity of that Rank; and that every Captain should have ten thousand thousand Pounds, and the Seamen a Gratuity of two Month's Wages. That Signor Patinho would satisfy him of the King of Spain's Security for the Performance of this Agreement, and that no Body else but the Dukes of Ormond and Mar were in the secret. Whether he wrote by Direction or not, does not appear, but the Letter met with the Contempt it deserved. He likewise sent another Letter to Captain Walton, with the Promise of a Reward of ten thousand Pounds, a Commission of Admiral of the Blue, and to be made an English Peer, if he would bring his Ships into Messina, which the honest Captain brought to the Admiral, with vehement Expressions of Abhorrence and Indignation.

Signor Patinho, had hitherto resided in Messina, directing the Affairs of the Island for the Interest of his Master with great Prudence; but his Presence being wanted at the Court of Spain, he embarked on Board a clean Felucca, on the 16th January, in the Night, and put to Sea, attended by two Gallies. If the Darkness had continued an hour longer, he would have unavoidably fallen into the Mouths of two of our Cruizers, which chased his Gallies into a Bay near Palermo, but the Felucca escaped and landed him in Italy, from whence he proceeded to Madrid, and by his Councils and Industry all Methods were used for supporting their Army in Sicily with Recruits of Men, and all Necessaries of War. The Venetians and Genoeses, and even the French Consuls in the Ports of Italy, notwithstanding the severe Prohibitions of the Regent, were corrupted to give them all the Assistance possible; and though many Vessels were taken, many escaped. As to the French, the Admiral found himself under

under a difficulty how to treat the Ships of a Nation that was in strict Alliance with England: He made loud Complaints of their Partiality, 'till at last the Regent gave him leave to confiscate all those he met with in the Service of Spain, which put some stop to their clandestine Proceedings.

It may not be improper to mention here an Instance or two of the unfair Practice of other Nations at this time upon the English Trade, and which it is to be apprehended will always be the Case, whenever England is engaged in Foreign Wars. The Admiral having Intelligence from Genoa, that a Privatier of 24 Guns had been fitted out by French Merchants of that Place, and was cruizing with a Spanish Commission off of Cape Corso, and having no small Frigates with him, he converted the Loo Hospital Ship into a Frigate, and putting 20 Guns and 100 Men

Men into her, sent her, under the Command of Captain Prothero, in quest of the said Privatier. The Captain fortunately met with her off of the Island of Capraia, and after a smart Engagement, took her. She had 130 Men, most French, of whom 56 were killed, and 19 wounded, with the Loss only of two Men in the Loo, and four wounded. The Admiral directed the Prisoners to be sent to Thoulon, and delivered into the Custody of the Intendant: And he wrote to the English Ambassador at Paris to represent those Proceedings to the Regent, to whose Justice he left the Prisoners.

Another Ship was fitted out at Venice with 50 Guns and 250 Men, all Venetians, except three Spaniards and eight English, and having taken a Spanish Commission at Malta, which Signor Patinbo had lodged there for her, she went a cruizing on the Coast

Coast of Spain. The Admiral being informed of it, sent the Orford and Rupert after her, the latter of which meeting with her off of Peniscola, engaged and took her by Boarding, having killed 61 Men, and wounded 29, with the Loss only of one Man killed, and three wounded.

The Admiral having refitted most of his Squadron at Portmahon, hastened away from thence with four Men of War the 30th March, leaving the rest to follow him, and arrived the 4th April at Naples, where he hoped to find the Army from Hungary arrived, and in a readiness to embark; but contrary to his Expectations, he saw every thing in extreme Backwardness, partly for want of Money.

On the 23d of April Count de Mercy arrived at Naples from Vienna, to take upon him the Command of the whole whole Army. He was a Native of Lorrain, but brought up in the Emperor's Service, where he had risen to the Rank of General of the Horse. He was of a tall graceful Presence, with a very soldierlike Appearance, but had the Misfortune of being short sighted, almost to Purblindness. He had great Strength of Body and Mind, and was indefatigable in the use of both, when necessary. He was full of Fire, and his Conversation abounded with Wit and Humour. He had great Skill in Courting and Caressing Persons, when he wanted to gain any Point, but at other times his Behaviour discovered much Haughtiness. He had an insatiable Thirst for Glory, which was seconded by a bold and most resolute Temper, always heading his Troops himself, and seemed to have a sort of Passion for fighting. He was seldom in any Action but he was wounded, wounded, and was not esteemed a fortunate Officer. He despised an Enemy too much, was impatient for Engaging, and had the Character of not caring what Men he sacrificed to obtain his Purpose, tho' a few day's Patience might perhaps have succeeded as well without it, which Opinion made the Soldiery uneasy under him, as they were in continual Apprehensions of being led to the Slaughter. Upon the whole, as he had great Parts, and great Experience of Service, he must have made a great General (as he was a compleat fine Gentleman) if he had had a cooler Temper, or could have commanded it better. But with all his Faults he was certainly in the Superior Rank of Men, of which there needs no better Proof, than that he was a favourite of Prince Eugene. He was now going to encounter an old School-fellow in the Marquis de Lede, Lede, who was a Fleming by birth, and a good General under a quite opposite Character, being as different from the other in Person, as he was in temper. He was of a low misshapen Stature, not affable or open in his Disposition, but much esteemed for his Judgement and Prudence, and was of great military Experience too. He was as cautious and circumspect as the other was bold and enterprizing; and in this respect both seemed to be in their proper Employment, the one in a Situation of Defence, the other of Attack. It was thought, that in the Course of this War, he slipt some Opportunities, which the Oversights or Wants of the Germans gave him of acting upon them to Advantage; but he considered, that he was in a Country where he was shut up from receiving any considerable Supplies of Men, while the Enemy poured in what Numbers they pleased, and that any large Diminution of his Troops might endanger the whole, and therefore made it a principal Point to preserve his Army as much as possible, and with the Advantage of the Passes, and the Affection of the Country-People, to distress and disable his Adversary, which he effected with much Skill and Wisdom, and maintained the Honour of the Arms of Spain with great Reputation; and at last, when the King his Master was forced, by the weight of the Alliances against him, to relinquish the Island, he brought a gallant Army back into Spain.

Numbers

The City of Naples was at this time full of General, Officers, and Persons of high Quality and Distinction, and abounded in all the Pleasures of that delightful Climate. The Viceroy was studious of making the Place agreeable to the Admiral, as much out of Affection, as Politeness. On the Festival Day of St. Januarius, he appointed him a Box near his own, to behold that famous Ceremony. The Blood continued long without liquifying at the Approach of the Head of the Saint. The vast concourse of People began to shew Signs of Concern: They fell first to praying, afterwards proceeded to Groans and Lamentations; and at length such a confused Murmuring and Uneasiness was perceived amongst them, that the Viceroy being apprehensive of some ill Consequences, sent Count Hamilton to the Admiral, to beg he would not take it ill, if he desired him to retire, not knowing what effect it might have upon the Populace, if they should take it into their Heads to attribute the failing of the Miracle to the Saint's being displeased at his Presence. The Admiral had no sooner quitted.

as

quitted his Box, and was stepping into the Viceroy's Coach, but he heard a prodigious Shout of, é fatto, é fatto, it is done, it is done, and such Joy and Exultation appeared in every Countenance, as if they had been delivered from some terrible Calamity.

Whilst the Troops were arriving, and the Vessels to transport them getting ready, the Admiral assisted at several Conferences with the Viceroy and the General, about the intended Descent on Sicily. All agreed, that Syracusa was out of the way, but it was not so easy to determine, whether it would be best to land at Palermo, or near Melazzo. The former was judged safest, and would not only make them Masters of the Capital City, but also of the fertile Province of Mazzara, from whence they might easily draw Provisions and Necessaries for the Subsistence of the Army. But the latter was most expeditious, as it would press the Enemy closer, and bring Matters more quickly to a Decision; and this last Opinion prevailed. But when they came to examine into the State of their Military Stores, they were so deficient in a Train of Artillery, that the Admiral yielded to supply them with Cannon, Powder and Ball from the Spanish Prizes, rather than suffer time to be lost for want thereof.

G

expe-

All things being at length got ready, the Army embarked, consisting of 10000 Foot, and 3500 Horse, all choice Troops, and the Flower of those that had lately served victoriously in Hungary. The Admiral set sail from the Bay of Baye the 22d of May, with eight Men of War, and above 200 Transports; and on the 27th in the Evening arrived before Melazzo, from whence General Zumjungen came off, and advised
Count

Count De Mercy to land in the Bay of Patti, about 20 Miles Westward, the Coast to the Eastward being all guarded by the Enemy. Upon this, so good a Disposition and Order was made, that the next Morning early all the Foot landed in less than two Hours, and most of the Cavalry by Three in the Afternoon, having only lost two Horses in the Voyage.

Upon the landing of the Imperialists, the Marquis De Lede decamped with Precipitation, and marched, without halting, to Franca Villa, a strong Post 32 Miles distant, in a mountainous Country, and from whence three Roads led, to Palermo, Messina, and Syracusa. Count De Mercy arrived by easy Marches at Melazzo, and found in the Spanish Camp some Cannon, with Ammunition and Utensils of War, which the host of the Spaniards had left behind. The Admiral coasting along with the Army, anchored before Melazzo, and landed there the Remainder of the Horse, with the Tents, and other Necessaries of War.

G 2

with

Whilst Matters were preparing here for the farther Operations of the Army, Count Seckendorf was detached with a Body of 2500 Foot, and 150 Horse, to reduce the Islands of Lipari to the Emperor's Obedience, which he effected, after some Resistance, in four Days time. This Conquest was absolutely necessary to keep open the Navigation between Naples and Sicily, which had been disturbed by the armed Vessels of those Islands. Lipari, the principal Island, is said to contain 8000 Inhabitants, a bold People, addicted to Pillage, and the best Mariners in those Parts.

It was now under Deliberation, whether the Army should go and besiege Messina, or follow the Spaniards, who

who were strongly entrenching themselves at Franca Villa. Messina had a numerous Garrison, and was well provided for a long Siege, which might waſt away the Summer, whiſt the Spaniards got in the Corn, now near ripe, and kept the Magazines of the Iſland in their Poſſeſſion. It was therefore determin'd to march towards the Enemy, and to endeavour to bring them to a Battle. The haſty Retreat they had made from Melazzo animated Count De Mercy ſo much, that he did not imagine they would make any great Stand at Franca Villa, but that he ſhould * trample them under Foot, (which was his Expreſſion) when he came up with them. The way to the Enemy lay through a barren mountainous Country, and it took up ſo much time to get together a few

* Qu'il leur paſſeroit ſur le ventre.

Mules and Horses for Carriage from Calabria, that the Army did not move from Melazzo till the 17th of June, amounting to about 21000 Men. They suffered a most painful March of three Days, thro' wild unknown Roads, broken up, and rendered almost unpassable by the Enemy, conducted by ignorant Guides, and climbing over cragged Rocks and Precipices, the Soldiers oppressed with the weight of their Ammunition, and six Days Bread which they carried, besides their Arms, with a fiery Sun burning over their Heads, and harrassed and assaulted all along from the Heights and Eminences by the armed Peasants of the Country, mixed with some Spanish Foot; but arriving the 19th in the Afternoon on the top of the Mountain of Tre Fontane, they discovered the Enemy encamped below in the Valley of Franca Villa. At the sight of their Camp, a Shout of Joy ran through the whole Army, in hopes of coming to a decisive Action, which seemed to promise favourably to them, it not being imagined, that the Enemy could post themselves in a bottom with so much Advantage against an Army descending from higher Ground upon them.
of

The Situation of the Spanish Camp was in this manner. The rapid River Cantara, whose Banks are of a steep quick Rock, from six to eight Foot perpendicularly deep, and runs thro' the Valley of Franca Villa, was in their Front. Their Left was on the rising Grounds about Franca Villa (the Town lying behind in their Center) and extended to a high Mountain, where they had placed some armed Peasants, and a few Foot. On the other side of the River, (but joined by a Bridge to the Town of Franca Villa) was a steep Rock, with a Convent of Capuchins upon it; Here they placed five Battalions of their best Troops, in as many Rows of Entrenchments cut into the Rock, one above the other; and at the Point of the Rock was a small Battery of two Pieces of Cannon of Three-pounders. On their Right they had carried on a Fortification of large Stones, like a Wall, all along the River, as far as a high rocky Hill, which had a Convent on the top, as advantageously fortified as that of the Capuchins; and close behind the Hill, the steep River Castiglione runs into the Cantara, by means of which Confluence, and the neighbouring Mountains being guarded by armed Peasants, the Spaniards were secure from any Danger in their Rear. It was unfortunate to the Germans, that not one Deserter, nor even a Peasant of the Country (who were all up in Arms in favour of the the Spaniards) came over to give them the least Information, so that they knew little of the Strength and Advantage of the Enemy's Post, till they came to Action, and were within Musquet-shot of their Trenches.

the

Count De Mercy made a Disposition for attacking the Enemy that Evening at three different Places. He detached all the first Line of Foot, consisting of sixteen Battalions, and twenty-three Companies of Grenadiers, with three hundred Hussars, under the Command of General Zumjungen, to an adjoining Hill on the Left. He had under him the Lieutenant-Generals Wallis, Wachten-donck, and the Prince of Holstein. Upon that Hill General Zumjungen was to separate his Men in two Bodies, the one under the Command of Wallis, consisting of eight Battalions and eleven Companies of Grenadiers, being to descend on the Right,

Right, whilst Zumjungen, did the same on the Left with eight Battalions, twelve Companies of Grenadiers and the Hussars. All the Horse and second Line of Foot, this consisting of twelve Battalions under Lieutenant-General Seckendorf, and the Horse under Lieutenant-General Count D'Eck, consisting of thirty-five Squadrons, including three Companies of Horse-Grenadiers and as many Carabiniers, were at the same time to descend from the Mountain of Tre Fontane, and join the other Bodies below. Before all this could be effected, Night came on, which obliged them to put off the Attack till the next Morning; and at break of Day the second Line of Foot being got down, and meeting with ten or twelve Squadrons of the Enemy in the Valley, they obliged them, as they advanced, to retire towards their Entrenchments. When the Army was was got down to the Places appointed in the Valley, Count De Mercy perceiving, that the Enemy possessed several considerable Posts on a Hill to his Right, from whence they would flank him in his Attack, he ordered Lieutenant-General Seckendorf, and the Prince of Hesse-Cassel, with six Battalions to endeavour to dislodge them from thence, and then to descend and rejoin the Army in the general Attack, which the Generals Zumjungen and Wallis were ordered to defer till they saw Seckendorf engaged, and descending towards them. The Hill being very steep and difficult, and the Enemy being very advantageously posted, Seckendorf was obliged to make many Windings, which took up much time to get up to them. In the mean time the Enemy seeing that Detachment, sent more Foot thither, which made Count De Mercy strengthen him him with four Battalions more, so that it was four in the Afternoon before they all arrived on the top of the Mountain. Seckendorf having his ten Battalions together, drove the Enemy down to the bottom of the Mountain, and from thence to their Entrenchments, and if Night had not come on too soon, it was thought he would have been able to have forced his way into their Lines, which at that Place were weakest, and easy to be penetrated. At the same time four Companies of Grenadiers of Wallis's Body attacked a Post of the Enemy on the Back of the same Hill, and drove them from thence, whilst the rest of the Grenadiers (being seven Companies) sustained by the Battalions of the same Body, and the Regiment of Dragoons of Anspach, attacked a small Entrenchment which the Enemy had made across the Valley, and having carried it, they advanced on towards the Rock of the Capuchins, which they attacked about six in the Evening, being reinforced by two Battalions of Leffelholtz, which Count De Mercy had drawn from the Left to sustain them. Here was very warm and bloody Work, the Germans being exposed to a continual Fire from the several Trenches of the Enemy on the sides of the Rock. During this Attack, Count D'Eck, with the Carabiniers and Horse-Grenadiers, followed by the Regiments of Horse of Tiege, Hanover and Portugal, traversed the Valley within half Musquet shot of the Enemy, and placed himself to the Left of Zumjungen, the Plain there appearing large enough for the Horse to act, and to sustain Zumjungen's Attack, and penetrate with him into the Enemies Entrenchments. But this Motion of the Horse crossing Zumjungen in his his March, did very much retard his Attack, so that it was late before he attacked three Cassines which stood near the River, within eighty Paces of the Enemy's Lines, which he took, not without loss of Men. Here the Prince of Holstein was mortally wounded, and being left on the Field of Battle, he sent to the Marquis De Lede, who caused him to be carried into Franca Villa, where he died three Days after. While Zumjungen was disposing his Troops to attack the Entrenchments, by the way of a Mill which lay on the River opposite to the Cassines, he perceived the Hessian Battalions on his Right following by mistake the two Battalions of Leffelholtz to the Rock of the Capuchins, which disappointed his Design, for it was Night before they returned. Count De Mercy animated his Troops every where by his Presence and Example, heading heading himself the two Battalions of Leffelholtz at the Attack of the Capuchins, and after having one Horse killed under him and two disabled, he was at last himself dangerously wounded in the Reins with a Musquet Ball. Night coming on put an End to the Action, and left things undecided, except that the Germans maintained some small Posts they had gained, which served to straiten the Enemy in their Camp. In this Action the Germans had 846 Men killed and 2449 wounded, amongst the latter the Admiral's second Son, very dangerously, who served as a Voluntier. The Spaniards had about 1500 Men killed or wounded.

car-

Count De Mercy having withdrawn his wounded Men in the Night, ranged his Army in order to renew the Attack next Morning; but the Action of the day before having convinced the other Generals of the strong strong Situation of the Enemy, and perceiving the Soldiers extremely dispirited and dejected with their Hardships and ill Success, they with much difficulty prevailed upon him not to persist in that Resolution, but by extending to the left, endeavour to cut off the Enemy from Messina, and open a Communication with the English Convoy, which (according to agreement) was to rendezvous in Schiso-Bay near Taormina a Sea-port Town, about three Hours distant from Franca Villa, with the Transports laden with Provisions, Ammunition, Baggage and other Necessaries, which the Army stood in extreme need of. Here was a Contingency of great Hazard and Danger, which gave the Germans much Fear and Uneasiness. For it might have happened, that the Winds had hindered the Convoy from passing thro' the Fare. Or, if they should have gained gained their Passage into Schiso Bay, Taormina and all that Coast was possessed by the Enemy, and it was possible that the Ships might not be able to open a Communication with the Shore. Or still, if both those Points succeeded, the establishing a Correspondence between the Sea and the Camp, thro' a hostile Country, was another Work of Hazard and Difficulty; and a disappointment in any one of them was the inevitable Ruin of the whole Army, who saw themselves near the End of their Provisions, without any other Possibility of getting more. But they were soon delivered from their Fears, by hearing that the Convoy was safely arrived in Schiso Bay; that the Sailors had taken and destroyed a small Fort of two Guns, which had endeavoured to molest their anchoring; and that the Guns of the Men of War had dispersed a Body of Troops, which the Marquis de Spinola had sent from Messina to the Sea-Side, to oppose them. Upon this reviving News, Count De Mercy sent General Wachtendonck, with 3000 Foot and 500 Horse, down to encamp at the Sea-side where the Ships lay at Anchor, and ordered the Roads, which were hardly passable, to be repaired under the Direction of Engineer General Schmettau; and having got some Field Pieces from the Ships up to the Camp, he greatly annoyed the Enemy, who lay beneath him. This Communication was too important for the Marquis de Lede not to endeavour to interrupt it, and, amongst many Skirmishes that daily happened, a Party of 700 Spanish Horse fell in with the Bread Waggon and Mules that were returning from the Sea-side, laden with Provisions for the Camp, and guarded only by 300 Horse. The defence

H which

the

the Germans made, was reckoned a galant Action, and I am sorry my Materials do not mention the Commander's Name. A small Party of Foot, that happened to be in the Neighbourhood, hearing the Fire, and coming up to their Assistance, they put the Spaniards to Flight, and conducted the Waggon and Mules safe to the Camp.

Let us now return to the Admiral. When Count De Mercy parted from him at Melazzo, to go in quest of the Spanish Army, it was his design to return to Naples, and put things there in motion for an intended Expedition to Sardinia, which the Duke of Savoy had much at heart, and was no less pressed by the Courts of England and France. But reflecting within himself, that the impetuous Temper of the German General, and the Contempt he saw he had of the Enemy, might possibly bring

H 2

bring about some Occasions that would want his Assistance, ~~he tar-~~ried a few days on the Coast in uneasy Expectation of the News of the Success of the March from Melazzo. The armed Peasants had cut off all Communication between Franca Villa and Melazzo; so that the first mis-doubt he entertained that things had not gone well, was from hearing the firing of the Guns at Messina, and at the Fare, and seeing great Illuminations made along the Coast. Soon after, he perceived the Neapolitan Gallies rowing out of the Fare, and the General of them coming on board, gave him an imperfect account of the Action, but enough to satisfy him that it had not been fortunate; upon which he immediately embarked two Battalions from the Garrison of Melazzo, and about a thousand Recruits who were just arrived there, and sent them the same day day under a Convoy through the Fare to Schiso Bay. In the Evening he received Letters from Count De Mercy, informing him of the particulars of the whole Action, with the great difficulties he laboured under, and uncertainty what to do, earnestly pressing him to come to the Camp, that they might confer and consult together. Upon this, the Admiral sent his first Captain with his own Ship and two others to Naples, by whom he sent a Letter to the Viceroy, giving his Opinion, that all thoughts of an Expedition to Sardinia should be laid aside for the present, and the Troops which could be spared from his Government, sent immediately into Sicily, 'till whose Arrival all things there would be at a Stand; and that he had sent his Officers and Ships to assist in and expedite that Service. He then embarked on Board the General

ral of the Gallies, laying aside the Ceremony of his Flag and Character, and in his way to Schiso, Count de Ligneville came to him in a Felucca, bringing fresh Letters from Count De Mercy, which expressed his great Impatience to see him. Being landed at Schiso, General Wachten-donck renewed the same Entreaties, which the Admiral's Zeal did not want, who accepting that General's Horses, and forgetting for a while his own Station and Element, sat out under a strong Escorte, attended by Captain Matthews and his eldest Son, and passing thro' Roads strewed with dead Bodies of Men and Horses, that had fallen in Skirmishes the days before between the Sea-side and the Camp, he alighted at Count De Mercy's Tent in the Evening, where a Guard of Grenadiers being drawn out for his Reception, one of them was shot through the head by by a Musquet-Ball from the Enemy's Camp, at the door of the Tent, and fell down dead at his Feet. He found the General very weak and faint with his wound, the Ball still remaining in his Reins, but as he had a Magnanimity of Spirit superior to his Condition, it did not hinder them from entering into Conversation on the melancholy Situation of their Affairs. The General

 " made great Complaints of Zum- " jungen, to whose Slowness in " marching and coming so late in" to Action, he attributed his ill " Success. He said, he himself " was still of Opinion to make ano" ther Attack upon the Enemy, ra" ther than decamp and retire, but " that his Officers in general were " against it ; and in that Case he " saw nothing left for them to do,
 " but to go down and join their " Forces at the Sea-side, and march

“ into the Corn Country about Ca- “ tania and Syracusa, for their bet“ ter Subsistence. That he had “ wrote for two Battalions of Sa- “ voyards to be sent to him from Sy- “ racusa, which, with the Troops “ the Admiral had sent from Me- “ lazzo, would repair his Loss of “ Men, but that the Loss of his Of“ ficers was irretrievable ; for be“ sides many killed, a considerable “ Number of the best and principal “ were wounded, and incapable of “ present Service.”

After many Propositions and Schemes started and discussed between them, without any being concluded on, the Count prayed the Admiral to stay in the Camp that Night, to be present at a Consultation of General Officers next Morning. The Conversation being ended, the Admiral went to see his Son, who (as is mentioned before) had been

been wounded in the Action, and whom he found languishing in his Tent, in a way that gave little hopes of his Recovery; not so much from the Malignity of the Wound (tho' that was in a dangerous Part) as from the Unskilfulness of those who attended him.

It may be wondered, that the Emperor is so well served in the Courage of his Troops, when so little Care is generally taken of their Preservation in Accidents of Wounds or Sicknes. Surgeons and Medicines are few and bad in their Armies, and there is little difference between being wounded and killed in Action, except that of a lingering or a sudden Death. After the Battle of Franca Villa, the wounded Men were laid on the Ground, with their Ammunition-Bread set by them, and left exposed to the Sun and Fortune. The General himself had only his own
Valet

Valet de Chambre to dress his Wound, and attend him. It was a moving Spectacle to the Admiral, to meet with great Numbers of poor Wretches in his way up to the Camp, some endeavouring, with the Support of their Wives or Comrades, to crawl down to the Sea-side, in order to get a Passage over to the Hospital at Reggio; others unable to go on from Pain or Faintness, falling down on the Earth, and left to die there. This is a great Blemish of their Service, and gives handle to the Maxim which their Enemies would fix on them, That they account it cheaper to get a Man than cure one, and so give themselves little Concern for his Recovery.

Such an universal Dejection had reigned throughout the Army on account of the ill Success of the late Action, and for the Loss or Disability of so many brave Officers; and they had such continual Apprehensions, sions, that the fiery Temper of their General would order them on another Attack, that their Joy on the Arrival of the Admiral was inexpressible. They looked on him as their Deliverer, who alone, they thought, could extricate them from their present Difficulties and Misfortunes, and influence their General with cool and prudent Councils. In the Morning early he visited General Zumjungen, the second Person in the Army, whose sedate deliberate Temper had procured him great Esteem and Confidence among the Soldiery. “ He complained much of the General’s “ rash Impatience, in not giving time “ to all the Troops to come up; “ which if he had done, and had “ delayed the Attack till next Morning, they would have had the “ whole Day before them, have “ judged better of the Measures “ for carrying it on, which would “ then

“ then have been disposed in another “ manner, and with more reasona“ ble Expectation of Success; and “ that this was not his own single “ Opinion, but that of all the other “ Officers. He bewailed the little “ Regard the General gave to the “ Advice of his Officers, and en“ treated him to oppose any Over“ ture he might make, at the Con“ sultation, for another Attack, which “ he feared was not out of his “ Head, and that he (the Admiral) “ only had Credit enough to dissuade “ him from it.”

The principal Officers of the Army being met in the General's Tent, the first Point he put in question was, Whether the Enemy should be attacked again? The Officers keeping a long Silence, and directing their Looks to the Admiral, he addressed his Speech to the General, “ wherein he reminded him of the “ Warn-

“ Warning he had formerly given “ him not to despise the Enemy, “ whose Numbers and Resolution he “ now experienced to be otherwise “ than what he had expected; he “ said, that he had viewed the Situ“ ation of the Enemy’s Camp the “ Night before, and though he did “ not pretend to much Judgement in “ the Operations of Land-Service, “ yet it seemed to his plain Under“ standing, that for one Army to “ attack another, equal in number, “ under the shelter of strong and “ almost impregnable Intrenchments, “ was rather an Undertaking of De“ spair than Discretion, and could “ not be attended with any reason“ able hopes of Success.” All the other Officers declaring themselves of the same Opinion, that Question was laid aside. It came next under Deliberation, What the Army was to do? The General’s Opinion was, “ That

“ That it was insufficient for a speedy “ Conquest of the Island, in regard “ the Enemy had as numerous an “ Army, with all the strong Holds “ and Magazines in their Possession, “ and the Affection of the People “ on their side. That as they could “ not continue where they were, it “ was his Opinion, they should “ march into the fertile Country “ about Catania, and endeavour to “ make themselves Masters of Au- “ gusta; or else canton themselves “ about Syracusa for their better Sub“ sistance, till new and effectual Sup“ plies of Troops were sent from “ Germany.” To this the Admiral replied, “ That he was so much of “ his Opinion, that they wanted a “ farther Reinforcement of Men, “ that upon the first News of the “ ill Success of the Battle, he had “ wrote to the Viceroy of Naples his “ Sentiments accordingly; that in“ deed

“ deed the Courts of London and “ Paris did earnestly press the carry“ ing on the Enterprize against Sar- “ dinia; but when they should come “ to be informed of the State of “ Affairs, they would probably con“ sent to have the Army, designed “ for that Expedition, pass first into “ Sicily, which, as things stood, he “ thought the nearest way to the “ Conquest of both Islands. That “ after his Departure from them, he “ would immediately go to Naples, “ and labour that Point with the “ proper Courts, with all the Ear“ nestness and Application possible.
“ That as to their marching in the “ mean time into the Country about “ Catania for Subsistence, he appre“ hended, it would give the World “ a worse Opinion of the late Ac“ tion than it deserved, and make “ it be concluded, that they had been “ defeated and disabled; which would “ blemish

“ blemish the Credit of their Arms, “ and give too much Spirit to the “ Enemy, and to the Sicilians in “ their Interest. That being now “ joined by the Recruits he had sent “ them, and the Battalions from Syracusa being daily expected, they “ would be in a condition to act “ offensively, and advance the Emperor’s Affairs; that Augusta was “ out of the way, and not worth “ their Attention; and delaying their “ time there was drawing the War “ into unnecessary Length; but that “ the way lay open to Messina, the “ besieging of which City would “ support the Character of their “ Arms, and the taking it make the “ Reduction of the rest of the Island “ easy. That as to what regarded “ the Fleet, the Experience of the “ last Winter, in keeping two Squadrons, one within, the other without the Fare, to block up the “ Ships

“ Ships in Messina, and secure the “ Passage of the Provisions which “ the Army at Melazzo drew from “ Calabria and Apulia, had deter“ mined him never to hazard again “ the Destruction of his Master’s “ Ships on a Service of such evi“ dent Danger, in that tempestuous “ Season, without having a Port to “ shelter or befriend him. That the “ Reduction of Messina was their “ mutual Interest, as his Ships would “ then clean there, and be more at “ hand to assist them; and the Cause “ of the Blockade being removed, “ he should be able to send a De“ tachment to cruize on the Coasts “ of Spain, which would straiten “ the Enemy, and obstruct their “ sending Succours into Sicily.” This Remonstrance had the weight it deserved, and not only convinced, but gave great Satisfaction to the General and his Officers; especially after his removing an Objection of their being in want of Cannon for Battery, by agreeing to spare them out of the Spanish Prizes, 27 Cannon of Twenty-four Pounders, 12 of eighteen, and as many of twelve Pounders; with a proportionable Quantity of Powder and Ball, to enable them to begin the Siege, and promising to solicit strongly at Naples for remitting to the Army all things necessary for carrying on that important Service with Success.

The Conference being over, the Admiral took his Leave, the General and all the Officers expressing the greatest Esteem and Affection for him at their parting, and being escorted down to the Water-side, he embarked in the nearest Man of War, and without regard to his own Dignity of moving at the Head of a Fleet, sailed away with two Ships only, and after an impatient Passage of eleven Days, a time tedious to a Mind active and charged with important Affairs, he arrived at Naples, where the first thing he heard with great Surprize and Concern, was, that his Friend Count Dawn was removed from the Government, and departed for Vienna, tho' his Time was not expired, and that Count De Gallas was come thither in his room. The displacing at that Juncture a Man so experienced in military Affairs, was a Step very inconvenient to the Emperor's Interest, and an unhappy Effect of Court Faction; for tho' the new Viceroy was a Man of undoubted Worth and Honour, and sustained the Character of Ambassador at the Courts of England and Rome with high Dignity and Magnificence, and in quieter times might have filled his Government with great Sufficiency and Applause, yet not being bred a Soldier, it was not to be expected, he could so readily comprehend the Springs of Motion in Armies, or foresee every Provision necessary for Military Operations, the timely Supplies of which are the surest Foundations of Success in War.
of

After the first Civilities, the Admiral entering into Conference with the Viceroy, painted out to him in very lively Colours the State of the Imperial Army in Sicily, “ where the “ Event of things, he said, had not “ answered the sanguine Hopes they “ had flattered themselves with on “ their landing in that Island; that “ instead of trampling over the Enemy, “ they had received such a “ Shock themselves, as very much “ humbled their Spirits and Expectations, “ and had been so far from “ making Impression on an Army “ favoured and assisted by the Natives, “ that they were reduced to “ think

“ think of their own Preservation, “ being entangled among barren “ Mountains, depending on a pre“ carious Subsistence from the Sea, “ and in a Country where every “ Man they saw was their Enemy; “ and finally, that without a Rein“ forcement, equal to another Army “ the Conquest of that Kingdom “ was impracticable.” The Admiral having proceeded thus far, was cautious of touching on the Army that lay in the Milanese designed for Sardinia; for by the last Letters, the Courts of England, France, and Turin were still very pressing for that Expedition; but he demanded of the Viceroy, whether the Emperor had any considerable number of Troops in Italy, besides those designed for Sardinia, to which he replying, he believed not; he asked, whether, if those Troops designed for Sardinia were immediately sent over to Sicily, they could soon be replaced by other Troops from Germany, to go on that Expedition, which the Viceroy doubting, he then spoke out his opinion plainly, " that the Expedition " to Sardinia ought to be laid aside " for the present; that the carrying " on both Undertakings together, " would end in the Failure of both, " and that the shortest way of getting both Islands, was by conquering one first." The Viceroy replied, " That the Proposition was " so much for his Master's Interest, " that his Concurrence with it was " not to be doubted, but that he " feared, he was not at liberty to " divert those Troops, without the " Consent of the other Courts in " Alliance, and prayed the Admiral " to make the proper Representations thereupon to them, as he " would do himself to the Emperor." The Conference being over, the Count

Count de Ligneville whom Count De Mercy had sent with the Admiral to Naples, was dispatched away to Vien-na, with Instructions to lay before that Court the State of their Affairs in Sicily, and the Measures proposed for retrieving them.

Naples seemed to be at this time the Center of Affairs in Europe. All the Powers in the Quadruple Alliance, as well as those who had any Concerns with them, had Ministers there to watch over their respective Interests, and drew their Measures from Information of what passed there. The Admiral went from the Viceroy to visit the Marquis de Breille, the King of Sardinia's Minister, and shewing him the weak Condition of the Imperial Arms in Sicily, and that the Expedient of sending the Troops designed for Sardinia thither, was the Effect of invincible Necessity, and not a Pretence for Postponing his Master's Interests, which the Courts of England and France had as much at heart as those of the Emperor, he convinced that Minister of the reasonableness of the Measure, who, at his request, represented the matter in a true Light to his own Court, and obtained his Master's Concurrence.

During the Admiral's Stay at Naples, the Grafton brought in two Genoesse Ships, which she had taken off of Palermo, with 600 Swiss Recruits on board for the Spanish Army, who were committed Prisoners to the Castles. The Lenox ran a third ashore with about 200 more Soldiers, and burnt her, but most of the Men escaped.

There being nothing more to do at Naples, 'till the Sentiments of the several Courts weré known upon the proposed Alteration of Measures, the Admiral determined in the mean time

time to pass over again into Sicily, hoping to find the Army before Messina, in which Case his Assistance would be wanted. He had then a strong feverish Disorder hanging on him, which had reduced him to a very low Condition; a little Rest seemed necessary for his Recovery, but his Heart was with the Army, and his Health had no part in his Thoughts. The Viceroy too was then ill in Bed of a Fever; they were desirous of seeing each other before the Admiral departed, having some necessary Points to settle together. The Admiral scarce able to stand, was carried to the Viceroy's Bed-side, where being seated, they could do little more than give broken and imperfect Hints to each other of what their minds laboured with, and were soon obliged to put an End to a Conference, wherein the weakness of their Bodies did not second the Zeal Zeal of their Hearts for the Publick Service. The Admiral complimented the Viceroy with as many of his Swiss Prisoners, as would be necessary to exchange what Germans were Prisoners in Sicily, and taking a final Leave of him, embarked for that Island. The Viceroy died two days after, whose Sickness the Italians attributed to his travelling through the Campania of Rome in the Dog-days, which they esteem fatal. His death threw the Affairs of that Kingdom into great Confusion, the collateral Council assuming the Government, and the military Power refusing to obey their Orders, which proved no small Disservice and Retardment to the Affairs in Sicily.

During the Admiral's Absence, Count De Mercy being struck blind with an Apoplectick Fit, was obliged to quit the Camp, and pass over to Reggio for Advice, leaving the Command

Command of the Army to General Zumjungen. General Wachtendonck had taken by Stratagem the Town of Taormina, a strong Pass in the way to Messina, upon which Encouragement Zumjungen broke up from Franca Villa with his Army on the 17th July without any Molestation from the Enemy, and forcing the strong Passes of Alexis and La Scaletta, with less Opposition than was expected, after a painful March through a mountainous Country, and excessive heats, but assisted by the Transport Vessels coasting along with the Provisions, Artillery, and heavy Baggage, he sat down the 20th before Messina, in which the Enemy had 3000 Men, under the Command of the Marquis de Spinola, an Officer of great Reputation, and well furnished with Provisions and all necessities for a long and obstinate Defence. In the mean time Count De Mercy

Mercy burning with Impatience to lye Idle at Reggio, notwithstanding the Anguish of his Wound, and the Surgeon's not being able to get the Ball out of his Body, as soon as ever he began to see a little with one Eye, returned to the Camp before Messina. The Admiral after a Passage of five days anchored the 28th off of the Point of the Fare, and being too weak to go out of his Ship, sent his first Captain ashore to the General to acquaint him with his Proceedings at Naples; and learning that he was in great want of Powder, sent him a considerable Supply.

The Imperialists having taken the Castle of Gonzaga, which stands on a Hill over the City; and the Bastion of the Town, called Secreto, having a considerable Breach made in it, and the Governor having withdrawn his Troops from the Town into the Citadel, the Senate of Messina sent out Deputies

Deputies to capitulate upon Articles, but the General desiring to know, whether he was to treat with them as Subjects of the Emperor, or as Enemies; if as the former, he bid them open their Gates, and receive his Troops, and he would interpose his good Offices with the Emperor in their Favour; but if he was to treat with them as Enemies, they were to get the best Terms they could for themselves, and he gave them leave to go back into the Town to consult with their Principals about it. They returned the same Evening, and told the General, that the next Morning, as soon as it was day, they would open their Gates, and rely on the Emperor's Clemency, and accordingly the Troops marched in the 8th August, and took Possession.

The City being taken, the Admiral landed some English Grenadiers who took the Tower of the Fare, which

which opening a free Passage for his Ships, he came to an Anchor in Paradise-Road, which the Officers of the Spanish Men of War in the Mole perceiving, and despairing now of getting out to Sea, they unbent their Sails, and unrigged their Ships, expecting their Fate with that of the Citadel. This gave the Admiral great Ease, and enabled him to employ Ships on other Services, which had long attended the blocking up of that Port.

It came now to be matter of Debate, what was to be done with those Ships when the Citadel should be taken, and they fall into their hands. Signor Scarampi, General of the King of Sardinia's Gallies, first started the Question, and claimed the two best of 60 and 64 Guns, new Ships, which had belonged to his Master, and were seized by the Spaniards in the Port of Palermo. He grounded his Right on a Convention made at Vienna 29th December 1718, in which it was said, “ that as to the Ships belonging to “ the King of Sardinia, if they be “ taken in Port, they shall be restor“ ed to him; but that this shall be re“ ferred to Admiral Byng to answer.”

To this the Admiral reply’d, “ that “ this Convention having been only “ a Ground-work for another to be “ made at Naples, he could be di“ rected by none but that which had “ been made in consequence thereof “ in April 1719, between the Vice“ roy of Naples, the Marquis de Breit- “ le Minister of Sardinia, and him“ self, in which no Mention is made “ of those Ships; and as to the Re“ ference to his Opinion, he did “ freely declare, he could not think “ the King of Sardinia had any Sha“ dow of Title to them; that they “ had been taken by the Enemy, “ were now fitted out and armed at “ their

“ their Expence, and under their Co“ lours; that they would put out to “ Sea, if he did not hinder them, and “ attack all English Ships they met “ with, and if stronger, take them; “ so that he could not consider them “ in any Light than, what they were, “ the Ships of an Enemy.” Count De Mercy next put in his Claim for the Emperor, alledging, “ that as “ those Ships would be found with“ in the Port of a Town taken by “ his Master’s Arms, according to “ the Right of Nations, they be“ longed to him.” The Admiral replied, “ that it was owing to his “ keeping two Squadrons on pur“ pose, and at a great Hazard, to “ watch and observe those Ships, that “ they were now confined within the “ Port, which if he was to with“ draw, they would still be able to “ go to Sea, and he should have a “ chance of meeting with and taking “ them.”

“ them.” But reflecting afterwards with himself, that possibly the Garrison might capitulate for the safe Return of those Ships into Spain, which he was determined never to suffer; That, on the other hand, the right of Possession might breed an inconvenient Dispute among the Princes concerned, and if it should prove, that they did not belong to England, it were better they belonged to no Body, he proposed to Count De Mercy to set up a Battery, and destroy them as they lay in the Bason; who urging, that he had no Orders concerning those Ships, and must write to Vienna for Instructions about it, the Admiral reply’d with some Warmth, that he could not want a Power to destroy every thing that belonged to the Enemy, and insisted on it with so much firmness, that the General being concerned in Interest not to carry Matters to a disagreement, caused a Battery to be erected, notwithstanding the Protestations of Scarampi, which in a little time sunk and destroyed them, and compleated the Ruin of the naval Power of Spain.

In five days after the taking of the City, the Imperialists obliged the Castles of Castelazzo and Matagriffone to surrender, and being thus become Masters of all the Castles and Eminencies about the City, they applied themselves to the Siege of the Citadel, where, from the Strength of the Place, the numerous and well provided Garrison, and the great Reputation of the Governor, they were sure to meet with a very warm and vigorous Resistance, and the more, as the Germans were ill provided with necessaries for such an Undertaking.

On the 13th August, the Count de Ligneville arrived in the Camp from Vienna, with the good News of the Emperor's having dispatched Orders to the Governor of Milan to send his Troops which lay in the Milanese, and were designed for Sardinia, down to Vado, in order to be transported into Sicily. He brought a gracious Letter from the Emperor to the Admiral, wherein he signified to him, * “ his Approbation of a “ Project that was the Effect of his “ Zeal and Activity ; the Satisfaction he had in his wise Conduct, “ and for his Love and Attachment “ to his Imperial Person and August “ House ; and on all Occasions he “ should give him Marks of his Affection and Esteem, and of his “ good Remembrance of the Services he had done him.”
of

The Transportation of the Troops from Genoa to Sicily, was a Service of such Moment, and dispatch in it so necessary, that the Admiral determined to conduct that Affair himself, well knowing from his Experience of the Slowness of the Germans in all their Undertakings, how much his Weight and Credit were necessary to give their Motions that Quickness which their Affairs required; and having intimated his Resolution to Count De Mercy of passing over to Naples, and from thence to Genoa for that purpose, he prayed the Admiral to represent plainly his Wants to the Government of Naples, which no body knew or understood better than himself, and giving him a List of what Particulars he wanted, added, jocosely, “ that “ as the Siege was a Child of his “ own begetting, he ought to nurse “ it, as well for his own sake, as for “ the common Interest.”

* See Appendix.

The Admiral sailed the 16th of August, and anchored the 23d before Naples, where the Cardinal De Schrot-

Schrottenbach was newly arrived by Sea from Rome, in quality of Vice-roy. The next Day the Admiral went to the Palace, and entering into Conference with the Cardinal, represented to him, “ how much the “ Army had suffered from the Divisions of the Government during “ the Interregnum; that the Siege “ they were employed in was a decisive Point, on which the Fate “ of the Island depended;” and setting before him the evil Consequences that would attend a Miscarriage by the want of necessary Supplies from his Government, he put into his Hand a List of Particulars he had received from the General. The Cardinal was an honest good-natur’d Man, and very willing to forward Affairs, but had no great Talents for Business. His high Quality had advanced him to the Purple, being Lord of a Principality in Bohemia, with some Marks of Sovereignty. He was appointed to manage the Emperor's Affairs at Rome after the Departure of Count Gallas, and, at his Death, succeeded him in his Government. He told the Admiral, " That by the Accounts he " had received from the proper Officers, there was not in the Stores

" the quantity of Cannon and Ammunition which the General demanded; that he would send to " Mantua for some Cannon, which " might be transported down the Po
" into the Adriatick, and so on by " Sea to Messina, where possibly,
" if no cross Accidents happened,
" they might arrive in two Months
" time." The Admiral coming to know, that those Cannon had no Carriages, the Cardinal thought he satisfied that Objection, by saying,
" he would send some Carpenters
" into the Woods of Abruzzo to cut " down

“ down Timber for Carriages.” These and the like unsoldierlike Proposals, gave the Admiral a sensible Regret of the Loss of Count Dann, in whose room he found himself co-operating with a Viceroy better qualified for his Breviary, than for Council in Operations of War, and whose Court was crowded with Monks and Priests, and such like disagreeable Objects, instead of Men of Business and Service. The Viceroy returned the next Day the Admiral’s Visit, and upon reconsidering the several Points in the General’s Demands, the same Difficulties recurred about complying with them, especially as to the Cannon and Ammunition. The Viceroy said, “ he would summon “ all the General Officers in Town, “ and consult with them about find“ ing out Expedients to satisfy the “ Wants of the Army, which was “ all that was in his Power to do;”

upon which the Admiral desired his Eminence, “ that after they had attended him and taken those Matters into Consideration, he might have a Conference with them.” Accordingly the next Day the General Officers came to the Admiral’s House, and entering into Conversation together upon the Particulars of the General’s Demands, which lay before them, the Articles relating to Corn and Recruits were soon got over, but the main Difficulty was the Demand of Cannon and Ammunition. The Admiral told them, “ That Count De Mercy had not above twenty Cannon in Battery, “ that he was within two hundred “ Paces of the Counterscarp of the “ Citadel, and hoped he should not “ be forced to stop in so fair a way, “ for want of necessary Supplies; “ and that he would be contented, “ if they could send him but ten or “ twelve

“ twelve Cannon from Naples, with “ a proportionable quantity of Pow“ der and Ball.” The Officer of the Ordnance attending, gave in a List of eight Cannon, which he said might be taken from the Mole and Batteries of the City, and sent to Messina ; but upon Enquiry, they appeared to be of fifty and sixty Pounders, some without Ball, others without Carriages, all of them too unweildy, and unfit for Battery. He then delivered in to them a State of all the Ordnance Stores in the Kingdom, upon examining of which, the General Officers unanimously confessed, that the whole Country was not able to furnish the Cannon and Ammunition which Count De Mercy wanted. This was such a Declaration of Weakness, as was not to be expected in so fine a Kingdom. The Admiral now plainly perceiving, that the Army had had no Ressource but what lay in himself, generously sent them twenty-four Pieces of Cannon of eighteen Pounders, belonging to the Spanish Prizes, and a proportionable quantity of Powder and Shot, contenting himself with the single Credit of the General for Repayment to the Captors, and at the same time wrote to Genoa and Leghorn to purchase 1000 Barrels more of Powder, engaging his own Security to the British Consuls for their Repayment.

During these Transactions, a number of Transports having been provided at Naples, the Admiral sent them under a Convoy to Vado, and having dispatched his other Affairs with the Cardinal, departed after them, and arrived at Genoa the 7th of September. The Town saluted his Flag with twenty-one Guns, and his Person with ten Guns and twenty Chambers, and the Republick sent off off six Deputies, three of the old, and as many of the new Nobility, to compliment him upon his Arrival.

The Admiral had been made to believe, that by the time of his Arrival at Genoa, the Army would be ready to embark; but he found every thing in extreme Backwardness. The Troops had not so much as begun their March from the Milanese, nor could get to Vado in less than a Fortnight; very few Provisions or Necessaries had been bought up, and none shipped; nor were the Transport Vessels properly fitted for the Reception of the Troops. Count De Bonneval, who was to command this Body, arriving the next Day, went on board the Admiral, and with great Mortification understanding that he intended to transport his Army to Melazzo, and even to Messina, if Count De Mercy should think think it necessary, and that in the mean time he wanted to send some of his Artillery before, with Powder and Ball, to enable that General to push on the Siege of the Citadel, he began in a boasting manner to tell the Admiral “ that his Army “ was upon an independent Establishment, and to act under his “ own separate Command. That “ the Project was, for him to be reinforced with Troops from Count “ De Mercy, and to march from “ Melazzo to reduce Palermo, and “ that part of the Island; and therefore he could not spare the Artillery, which he should want on “ that Service; and that as to Men, Count De Mercy had already enough with him to take the Citadel.” The Admiral replied, “ That it was no part of his “ Intentions to enter into any Reasoning about the separate Command .

“mand intended for him in Sicily, “but that he was sure Count De “Mercy would never consent to his “acting, much less reinforce him “with Troops to act, on any se“parate Service, till after the Re“duction of the Citadel, which “could not be effected without a “Supply of Cannon and Ammu“nition, and that the quickest way “for his entring on the Execution “of any such separate Projects, was “to have that Service first over.”

Bonneval then fell a railing at Count Coloredo, Governor of Milan, to whom he imputed all the Delays and Obstructions in this Affair;

“that he could never get from him “a List of the Troops designed “to serve under him; that he took “no care about the Provisions; nor “supplied the Military Chest, the “Artillery, or any other Contin“gents of the Army, according to “the

“ the Regulation made by the Coun“ cil of War at Vienna; and that “ he was resolved not to stir with“ out his full Complement, which “ was 6500 Men.” These things greatly embarrassed the Admiral; but the next Day the Governor having sent his Secretary and Adjutant-General to the Admiral, to compliment him upon his Arrival, they justified every part of his Conduct, and convinced the Admiral, that Count De Bonneval had not stated things in a fair Light: and indeed in the whole course of this Transaction, the Governor of Milan, who was a Man of Honour and Integrity, was not wanting in any thing, that depended on his Care and Power; but his good Intentions were ill seconded by the Sloth or Knavery of the Commissaries, who gave the Admiral insupportable Trouble. After much pains, he got two Vessels sent away under Convoy

Convoy of a Man of War, with some Cannon and Ammunition for the Army at Messina; but as to the main Point, he met with great Perplexity and Vexation. He had been twelve Days soliciting their putting Provisions and Necessaries on board the Transports, that they might be ready against the Arrival of the Forces, without any the least thing being done in it: Upon complaining of which to Count De Bonneval, he contented himself with laying the Blame on the Commissaries, who, he said, would do what they pleased, in spite of all that he could say to them, and being appointed by the Aulick Council of War at Vienna, had no regard to his Authority or Orders. With Difficulty the Admiral got them to come to a Conference at the General's House, where laying before them a State of the several Particulars still wanting for the the intended Embarkation, they protested, they could not get together so much Provision under fifteen Days time; but entering into a Discussion of each Particular, he plainly shewed them, that it might easily be compassed in seven. He then told them, “ That as the Governor of Milan “ had assured him, that the last Column of Troops would be at Va- “ do the 23^d, if any thing hindered “ their embarking the next Day, he “ would be trifled with no longer, “ but go away to Messina, where his “ Presence was wanted, and leave a “ Convoy to follow with the Troops; “ and advised them to consider seriously of the Blame they would “ incur from their Negligence.” This brought them to promise, that all the Provisions, Ammunition, and other Necessaries should be got ready and shipped off by the time appointed for the Arrival of the Troops.

They

They being accordingly arrived on the 23^d, and the Admiral having made a Disposition to embark them, the commanding Officer sent him word, that very little of the Provisions were shipped on board the Transports, that most part of the Biscuit and Wine was wanting, that there was no Salt, Oil, Brandy and Tobacco, nor any Hay or Oats; nor could he get any clear Answer from the chief Commissary, by what time those things could be provided. The Admiral sending his First Captain to find out those Officers he concealed himself from his Sight; and indeed the whole Conduct of those Officers, looked as if they designedly delayed, instead of forwarding this Service. As to Count De Bonneval, who had been appointed to command those Forces on the intended Expedition to Sardinia, he was so disgusted at his Disappointment,

L

ment, and the diverting them to a different Service, and to find himself going to act under the Command of another, that he gave himself no trouble to forward the Service, but spent his whole Time in Pleasures at Genoa. After incredible Pains and Labour, and at last such Menaces as the Commissaries, and even Bonneval himself, began to be afraid of, the Admiral shipt off the Troops to the number of about 6000, on the 27th of September, with such Provisions as could be got, and leaving a Man of War to convoy the Remainder when ready, sailed the 28th from Vado, but it blowing very fresh the 29th in the Night, the Sattees and Tartans with about 600 Men on board, and some Horses and Baggage, parted from the Fleet, and stood in with the Shore for Shelter. The Admiral receiving Letters, in his Passage, from
Count

Count De Mercy, requesting, that the Troops might not land at Melazzo, but go on to Messina, he stood away for the Fare, and arrived before Messina the 8th of October, which so elevated the Spirits of the Army, that upon the first sight of the Fleet, Lieutenant-General Wallis with 5000 Men made a vigorous Attack upon the Half-Moon which was nearest to their Approaches; and carried it but with the Loss of 103 killed, and 830 wounded. The Admiral repairing ashore to the General's Quarters, was embraced by him and all the General Officers with the most tender Marks of Affection and Gratulation, the whole Army being overjoy'd to see a Man who always brought them Relief and Success, and every Good that attended them. On the 17th, at ten in the Morning, the Imperialists assaulted the Counter-Guard, and mounted to the top of the Breach with great Gallantry, but, after two Hours very warm work, were repulsed with the Loss of 120 Men killed, and 617 wounded. The Governor having acquitted himself with great Honour in this Repulse, as well as in the general Defence of the Place, and finding himself unable to hold it longer, beat a Parley the next day, and surrendered upon Articles. On the 19th 600 Imperial Grenadiers marched in, and took Possession of a Gate of the Citadel. On the 21st the Spanish Garrison, marched out through the Breach, and were transported by Sea to Augusta. Thus ended a Siege of 91 days, which cost the Germans above 5000 Men killed or wounded.

Count de Bonneval finding his Troops incorporated with the Army, and his Projects of a separate Command vanished, pretended Sicknes, and and getting leave to go to Reggio for Advice, he repaired to Vienna, and returned no more to the Army. He was a Native of France, and had all the Sprightliness and Levity of that Nation. He was a gallant Officer, had received many Wounds, and still feels the painful Remembrance of a most terrible one he got in Hungary. He had no Zeal for the Service of his Prince, any farther than it suited his own Interest or Ambition, to which he willingly sacrificed his Duty. While the Admiral gave himself incredible Pains at Genoa and Vado to quicken the Departure of the Army, he was thought to throw in the Way all the secret Obstructions he could, 'till he knew the Issue of the Solicitations he was carrying on at Vienna, to be continued in a separate Command.

Whilst the Siege of the Citadel was depending, the Spanish Army decamped from Franca Villa 31st August, and marching towards Rametta, the Marquis de Lede gave out, that he would attack the Imperialists, and appeared upon the Hills in sight of the Camp, attended by a great Number of Peasants he had drawn together, but finding it well guarded, and his Army being sickly, he fortified a strong and advantagious Post at Castro Giovane in the Center of the Island, where he laid in large Magazines, in order to retire thither in case of Necessity, and in the mean time cantoned his Troops about Aderno, Paterno, and Catania.

It was during this Siege, that the Admiral, having received Information, that Vessels belonging to Malta had gone to Sea with Spanish Commissions, and taken some English Merchant Ships, sent a Letter to the Grand Master, "complaining " of his Partiality and Injustice, de" manding Satisfaction for the Da" mages

“ mages the Merchants had sustain“ ed, and his giving strict Orders to “ prohibit the like unfair Proceed“ ings for the future.” He wrote at the same time to Mr. Alexander Young, the English Consul at Malta, to make a strict Enquiry what Merchant Ships had been taken by Privati-ers fitted out from Malta, or wherein Maltese Subjects had been concerned, and to lay a State thereof before that Government, with a Demand of Reparation, and to let him know their Answer. The Grand Master and his Council being alarmed at this Message, sent the Chevalier Balbini to the Admiral, to represent and excuse the Proceedings of their Government in the Points complained of, and to lay before him the Difficulties they were under from their Dependance on Spain, and to endeavour to remove all Causes of his Dissatisfaction with them. But the Admiral not having yet received any specifick Account of the particular Losses of the Merchants, and so not able himself to settle the Terms of Restitution with Balbini, sent his first Captain (Saunders) with two Men of War to Malta, directing him “ to “ make an exact Enquiry into the se“ veral Captures that had been made, “ and to lay the same before the “ Grand Master and his Council, “ and to demand Reparation, so far “ as their Subjects had been concern“ ed therein; and in Case he found “ them willing to give reason“ able Assurances of doing Justice “ for what was past, and of a bet“ ter Behaviour for the future, he “ was to enter into a Convention “ with them for that purpose, and “ for establishing a good Agreement “ with them; but otherwise, he was to “ take all Ships and Vessels he should “ meet with belonging to that Island.”

Captain

Captain Saunders arriving at Malta, found a fair disposition in those People to give the Admiral and the English Nation all reasonable Satisfaction in their Proceedings. They shewed, “ that they had never consented to, “ or approved of their Subjects entering into the Service of Spain, but “ had issued strict Proclamations prohibiting them to be any ways concerned on either Side, in the War. “ They did not deny, that one of “ their Vessels had taken a Commission from the Marquis de Lede, to “ cruize upon the Enemies of Spain, “ but made appear, that they had “ sent one of their Order to entreat “ him to revoke that Commission, “ and had made the same Application to the Court at Madrid, but “ had been answered with great “ Roughness and Menaces. That to “ avoid as much as they could all “ Occasions of Complaint, they had “ called “ called in all their Privatiers which “ had been cruizing in the Levant “ against the Turks, in order to dis“ arm them ; but that they could “ not always govern the Unruliness “ of their People, when they would “ enter into the Service of any Chri“ stian Prince, whose Colours pro“ tected them from their Enquiry “ or Visitation, which was the Mis“ fortune of their Constitution, as “ they depended upon the Christian “ Princes of Europe for their Reve“ nue, and in particular drew at that “ time their daily Sustenance of Pro“ visions from that part of Sicily, “ which was under the Subjection “ of the Spanish General; and final“ ly, that they had received no part “ or benefit from the Prizes, which “ passed entirely thro’ the hands of “ the Spanish Agent, and in which “ they had no manner of Interest or “ Concern.” The Captain was convinced

vinced of the Sincerity and Truth of their Declaration, but on the other hand told them, “ that it was not his “ business to enquire into the Nature “ or Dependance of their Govern“ ment, and it was for them to ac“ commodate their Grievances with “ Spain as they could. That his In“ structions were plain, and found“ ed in Justice, demanding Redress “ for the Losses his Countrymen had “ sustained, from those who occa“ sioned them, who were their Sub“ jects; and that if they would not “ enter into a Negotiation for that “ purpose, he should be obliged to “ put his Orders in Execution.” Intimidated by these Threats, they immediately appointed two Commissaries to treat with him; and it being made out by Proof, that five English Merchant Ships had been taken by Maltese Ships under Spanish Colours, they submitted to pay the full Value

Value of them and their lading, within twelve Months after Application from the Claimants. But thinking themselves aggrieved by this Treaty, and protesting themselves to be under a Force to sign any Terms, rather than feel the Effects of the Admiral's Displeasure, they reserved to themselves a Liberty of appealing to the Equity of the Admiral, and from him to the King, for a mitigation of the Severity of the Conditions. They dispatched away accordingly the Chevalier de la Val to the Admiral, who not thinking he had any Right to compound for other Men's Properties, the Deputy passed on to the English Court at London, to execute his Commission. He had likewise a private Instruction, to implore the King's Interest with the several Princes at the approaching Congress, that Malta might be freed from it's Subjection to Sicily, and enjoy the Rights and and Privileges of a free and neutral Port, in time of War, among the Christian Powers.

The Imperialists having spent some time in levelling the Lines, Trenches, and Batteries before Messina, and in putting the Place into a Posture of Defence, they held several Consultations, at which the Admiral assisted, concerning what Measures were next to be taken. The Reduction of Messina had brought Val Demona under the Obedience of the Emperor, but the whole Province being mountainous and barren, was so little able to supply the Army with Provisions and Forrage, that the Inhabitants of Messina, and other Towns, daily petitioned the General for their own Subsistence, since they could draw no Corn, as they used to do, from the plentiful Parts of the Island, which were in the Possession of the Spaniards. To march after the Enemy my in a wintry Season, with their Horse already harrassed, and almost starved, through an adverse Country, and without any Provisions but what they carried; and, if they surmounted all these difficulties, to attack them in the strong Camp of Castro Giovane, was judged too rash to be attempted, after the Experience of Franca Villa. To march to Palermo, and get Possession of the Capital, was more desirable, than easy of Execution. It was a March of seventeen days, along the Northern Coast of the Island, through an unknown, mountainous, sterile Country, where they should be exposed to sudden Insults, great part of the Way being so narrow, that two Men could hardly go abreast; and if they met with no Enemy, they had no Forrage for their Horse, no Magazines in the way of their March, nor a sufficient Number of Beasts of burthen to carry ry Provisions along with them, nor Money to buy them, if they could be got. The next Project that occurred, was to go to Trapani, where the Piedmontese had a Garrison. This would be changing the Scene of the War to great Advantage, for instead of being confined and famished in the Mountains, they should be able to enlarge themselves in a plentiful Country, and by acting on equal Terms with the Enemy, have a reasonable Chance to drive them out of the Island. But to go thither by Land was impracticable, and as their Transport Vessels could not carry above a third Part of the Army at a time, the Division of their Troops was hazardous, and might be fatal. For Trapani being situated on an Isthmus, and having no Magazines of Corn, the Marequis de Lede might march, and pen up the first Detachment, within that narrow Neck of Land, where they would starve for want of Provisions, before the rest of the Army could join them. The only Choice remaining was to go to Syracusa, but that too was impracticable by Land, by reason of the same Objections as are already mentioned ; and besides, there lay in the Way several deep and rapid Rivers, where the Enemy might defend the Passages with great Advantage : And though it was not difficult to transport the Army thither by Sea, yet it was an uncomfortable Reflection, that they should be then the whole length of the Island distant from Palermo, and could only propose to subsist themselves from day to day during the Winter, the Enemy lying between them and the great Caricatori or Subterraneous Magazines, where the Inhabitants usually lay up their Corn, which were 90 Miles distant. With these disagreeable able Prospects they past away some days under Incertainty what to do; when one Evening the Generals Mercy and Zumjungen repairing on Board the Admiral, and renewing the Subject of their late Conferences, they told him in a very desponding manner, “ that having thoroughly weighed the Situation of their Affairs, “ and finding they could neither “ subsist, nor undertake any Action “ where they were, they had come “ to a Resolution to leave a strong “ Garrison in Messina, and to transport the Horse over by Sea to “ Calabria, and the Foot to Syracusa, where they might be able to “ maintain themselves during the “ Winter, and be ready to make use “ of such Advantages as might offer “ for acting against the Enemy in “ the Spring; and prayed his Assistance in that Service. The Admiral replied, that he hoped,

of

M

their

“ their Affairs were not so desperate, “ as they apprehended; that he had “ been employing his Thoughts for “ their Service, and believed, he “ should be able to extricate them out “ of their present Circumstances: “ That, of all the late Propositions, “ the transporting the Army to Trapani “ pleased him best, as it would “ turn the difficulty upon the Spanish “ Army, by obliging them to make “ uneasy Marches, and to keep the “ Field in the Winter. That when “ the whole Army was at Trapani, “ they should be able to enlarge their “ Quarters, the Granaries of Corn “ would fall into their hands, and “ their Neighbourhood to Palermo “ keep that Place in awe, ’till the “ Season should favour their march“ ing towards it, the Reduction of “ which would bring the War to a “ speedy Issue. That he had con“ sidered of the difficulty of substi-

“ ing —

“ ing one part of the Army at Trapani, till the rest arrived ; and,
 “ as England was in Peace with the “ Governments of Barbary, he would “ send his Secretary to Tunis, which “ was the nearest African Port to “ Trapani, and employ him and the “ English Consul to buy up whatever “ Quantity of Corn was necessary, “ and transport the same to Trapani.
 “ That he knew very well they had “ no Money, and therefore would “ employ his own Cash and Credit “ to procure this Supply, depend“ ing upon their honour for Repay“ ment, and did not doubt to lodge “ the Corn at Trapani, before the “ first Detachment of Troops arriv“ ed there.” Count De Mercy penetrating immediately into the Facility and advantageous Consequences of this Scheme, rose up, and embracing the Admiral in a kind of Transport, acknowledged “ that he had “ hit on the only Method practica“ ble, not only for the Preservation “ of the Army, but even for push“ ing on the War with Success. That “ as it was a Protestant Scheme, he “ should have Protestant Troops, and “ Protestant Generals to put it in “ Execution;” and accordingly General Zumjungen, with Count Seckendorf, the Prince of Hesse, and General Schmettau embarked the 23^d November with 7000 Foot and 500 Horse, and arrived fortunately in three days at Trapani, where finding a plentiful Remittance of Corn ready arrived from Tunis, they not only posted themselves there in Security, but enlarging their Quarters into the Country, brought the Cities of Marsala and Mazzara to submit to the Obedience of the Emperor. The Transports and Convoy returning, brought thither more Troops. Count De Mercy and the Admiral departing with the last Convoy

voy from Messina on the 19th January consisting of 5400 Foot and 1100 Horse, they were overtaken by a violent Storm off of the Isle of Alicudi, which drove all the Transports into Melazzo and Messina, the Admiral, with the General on Board his Ship, getting with difficulty to Trapani on the 29th, but the whole Convoy did not arrive there 'till the 2d March, many Soldiers dying in the Passage, and amongst them General Wachten-donck, regretted by every Body. The whole Army being got together amounted to 14000 Foot and 3000 Horse, besides the Garrisons left in Messina, Melazzo, Syracusa, and the adjacent Ports.

These Motions of the Imperialists made the Marquis de Lede quit the Posts of Mola, Taormina and Catania, and leaving a Detachment in his strong Camp at Castro Giovane, to secure the Magazines he had erected there, he marched and fixed his Camp from Alcamo to Salama, with his head Quarters at Castel Vetrano, from whence he continually sent out Detachments to destroy the Country about Marsala and Mazzara, and to carry off all the Cattle, Grain and Wine, which Zumjungen could not at first prevent; but being strengthened with new Supplies by Sea, he at last obliged their Parties to retire, and on the Arrival of Count De Mercy, the Spanish General was reduced to fortify his Camp with strong Entrenchments and Redoubts, with Batteries of Cannon.

M 3 marched

Count De Mercy making a Motion of extending his Quarters beyond Mazzara, the Marquis de Lede quitted Castel Vetrano, and retired with his Army to Alcamo, from whence he sent his Mareschal de Camp Signor d'Aponte, on the 6th of February with Overtures to Count De Mercy and the Admiral.

Admiral for evacuating Sicily, on Condition of Leave to transport his Army into Spain, and in Order thereto, desiring a Suspension of Arms. This Proposition contained nothing disagreeable to the Germans, who would thereby obtain all they wanted, by becoming Masters of the Kingdom without any farther Trouble; but the Admiral protesting against it, and declaring that not a Man of the Spanish Army should pass out of that Island, until a general Peace was made, for that it would be to furnish Spain with a Body of their best Troops to strengthen their Army acting against France, or else they might be employed in disturbing England, he was dismissed with this Counter Proposal from the Count De Mercy, that if the Marquis would surrender Palermo, and the South-side of the Island, and retire with his Army into the middle of the Country towards

Castro Giovane, or to any other Place proper for his Security, he would consent to a Suspension of Arms for six weeks, 'till the Sentiments of the several Courts might be known; which being an Advantage more than equivalent to the Operations of six weeks in that early Season, the Admiral consented thereto, with this Restriction, that if the Spaniards attempted to withdraw any of their Men in the mean time, the Suspension should be void, and he would act against them with all his Force. Count De Mercy dispatching Lieutenant Colonel Bellaire to Vienna, to acquaint that Court with these Overtures, and to bring back their Directions, the Admiral sent away thither his eldest Son Mr. Byng, with Instructions, that if the Imperial Court listened to the Proposals of the Spanish General, to declare, that his Father could never suffer any Part of the Spanish Army to depart out of the Island, 'till the King of Spain had acceded to the Quadruple Alliance, or 'till he received positive Instructions from England for doing so.

part

The 12th February Count De Mercy marched towards Castel Vetrano, for the more commodious Subsistence of his Cavalry, from whence he detached General Seckendorf with 1500 Men and some Cannon, to reduce Sacca, where there was a large Cavatore of Corn. The Town immediately surrendered, but the Spaniards, to the Number of 300, retired into the Castle.

The Marquis De Lede finding his first Propositions ineffectual, sent two General-Officers, the Marquis De San Vincenzo, and Signior D'Aponte, to the Imperial Camp the 19th of February, with Instructions to treat about the Surrender of Palermo and a considerable part of the adjacent Country, in consideration of a Suspension of Arms

Arms for three Months; but whilst the Negotiation was depending, the Marquis receiving an Express from Madrid on the 28th with Advice, that a general Peace was made, he sent immediately to break off the Treaty. This seemed Matter of great Surprize, but the secret Reason was, that Spain was at that time treating with France to restore Fontarabia, St. Sebastian, and other Places taken in the War, and hoped to get in exchange, for the Evacuation of Sicily and Sardinia, the Restitution of those Towns, and of Gibraltar; or, at least, to have both the one and the other referred to a Congress. Upon this, Count De Mercy gave fresh Orders for attacking the Castle of Sacca, which had been retarded by the great Rains. The Castle being batter'd with four Pieces of Cannon, and not very strong, surrender'd the 6th of March, the Garrison being made

Pri-

Prisoners of War. The taking this Place gave great Relief to the Imperial Army, who found there 20000 Solms of Wheat.

During these Transactions, a Courier dispatched from Paris by the Earl of Stair the British Ambassador there, brought the Admiral Information, that the Marquis De Beretti Landi, the Spanish Minister at the Hague, had signed the Quadruple Alliance the 17th of February; and he brought likewise a Packet from that Minister to the Marquis De Lede, and another from the Emperor's Minister to Count De Mercy, to acquaint them therewith. A Trumpet was sent with the Spanish Minister's Packet to the Marquis De Lede, and to know his Sentiments thereupon. He returned Answer, " That his Master's Minister having signed the Quadruple Alliance, he looked upon the Peace as a thing concluded, and was " there-

“ therefore ready to treat of a Cessa“ tion of Hostilities by Sea and Land, “ until they should receive farther Or“ ders from their respective Courts.”
To this it was replied, by the Admiral and Count De Mercy, “ That “ as the Evacuation of Sicily and “ Sardinia was to be performed with“ in two Months after the said Sign“ ing, they were ready to consent “ to a Suspension of Arms, upon “ his delivering up the City and “ Castles of Palermo, at which Place “ Transports would be best provi“ ded, and other necessary Measures “ concerted for the Transportation “ of their Army into Spain.” The Marquis returned Answer, “ That as “ he understood, the Plenipotentia“ ries of their Masters at the Hague “ were in Treaty for settling the “ Terms of evacuating those Islands, “ he did not think himself autho“ rized to agree to a Cessation on “ any

“ any other Condition, than that “ each Party should remain on the “ Ground they occupied, and expect “ farther Orders from their respective “ Principals.”

The Disadvantages arising from such an Agreement were too obvious to be submitted to; for the Men of War and Transports lay very inconveniently at Trapani, an unsafe Road; where they had sustained considerable Damage, and some of the Transports had been lost; it was therefore necessary to have Palermo, as a secure Retreat for the Fleet, and the most commodious Port for shipping off the Troops; besides it was a Pledge of the Sincerity of the Intentions of Spain to evacuate the Island. In the next place, it put the Germans under a manifest Inequality to be confined to the Ground they occupied, while the Spaniards were in possession of the principal Caricatori of Corn,

Corn, and plundered and rifled at pleasure a Country they were soon to leave. Nor could they comprehend, how an Enemy, who six Weeks before, offered to leave the whole Island, on condition of being sent back into Spain, should now scruple to surrender Palermo; and therefore as it had the Appearance of Chicaning, they resolved to go on with the Operations of the War. But before they proceeded to Action, they agreed to send a joint Letter to the Marquis, proposing an Interview between them at the Cassine De Rossignola, half way between the two Armies, where accordingly they met the 2d of April at Noon, with an Escorte of 200 Horse on each side. In the Conference the Marquis De Lede owned, “ That “ he knew the King his Master had “ signed the Quadruple Alliance, “ and did not doubt of his Inten“ tion

“ tion to evacuate Sicily; but declared, he had no Orders yet about it; that he expected full Powers and Instructions soon, and wished they would, in the mean time, come to a Cessation of Arms.”

He was asked, “ What Proposals he had to make for that purpose?”

He answered “ None, but that both Armies might hold the Country that was in their Possession, until he received Orders to treat about the Evacuation.” Count De Mercy thinking it unreasonable to be ty'd down to a small Tract of Country where he could not subsist, asked him, “ whether in case they should consent to his keeping Possession of Palermo, he had Power to deliver up Augusta, and the other Posts they held on that side of the Island, which were now of no use to him, but it would be rather a Conveniency to him to “ draw

“ draw away the Garrisons and “ Troops he had in those Parts, to “ join his Army, in order to the in“ tended Evacuation ?” He confessed, “ he could not give up, nor “ quit the Possession of any Part he “ had of the Island, until he recei“ ved farther Orders from his Ma“ ster,” and read part of his Instructions to them. Count De Mercy on the other side, shewed him part of the Emperor’s Orders, which directed him “ to agree to a Suspension “ of Arms in order to the Evacua“ tion of Sicily and Sardinia; and to “ concert with the Marquis De Lede
“ the necessary Conditions for faci“ litating the same, and to adjust that “ Affair by all reasonable Measures: “ But that, if the Marquis De Lede “ should not own his having Orders, “ or endeavour to evade them and “ gain time, by pretending to send “ to Madrid for farther Instructions,
“ and

“ and not name a reasonable time “ for beginning to embark part of “ his Troops, in that Case, he was “ to make use of his Arms to oblige “ him to execute the Treaty, which “ the Spanish Minister had signed at “ the Hague.” He farther told the Marquis, that the 17th of April was understood to be the time they should go upon the Evacuation, but if it was not possible for him to begin so soon, he would not differ about a few Days, provided they entred now into some Agreement about the manner of doing it. He offered him the Transports he had in his Service, and assured him, that he should be accommodated with Provisions and every thing he could in reason demand.
The Admiral, on his Part, gave him the like Assurances, and that he should be escorted by as many of his Master’s Ships, as he should desire. The Marquis owned, that all they said was N reasonable, reasonable, but complaining of the want of Orders, the Conference broke off without coming to any Issue. At parting, the Marquis prayed the Admiral to release the Bishop of Mazza-ra, who was his Prisoner, which the Admiral readily consented to.

During these Debates, one of the English Ships cruizing off Palermo, took a Felucca, sent by Cardinal Aquaviva from Rome, with Packets of Letters from Spain to the Marquis de Lede, which he delivered to the Admiral; who seeing the King of Spain's Seal to the Letters, generously sent them unopened to the Marquis, and set the Felucca and Crew at Liberty.

The Conference being broke off, the Admiral returned to the Fleet at Trapani, and Count de Mercy resolving to attack the Spaniards, marched towards Alcamo, where he arrived the 8th April, the Marquis having retreated the Night before with Precipitation, tion, leaving some sick Men behind, whom he could not carry away. The Marquis encamped at Valguernera and Sala di Partenico, but fearing to be followed by the Imperialists, he retired on to Monreale. The Retreat of the Spaniards made Count De Mercy resolve on the Siege of Palermo, in order to which he sent Colonel Baron Neyperg to confer with the Admiral about the necessary Assistance to be given by the Fleet in facilitating the March of the Army towards that Place, by coasting along with the Provisions and Necessaries they should want in their March, as well as in the Siege, and supplying them with Cannon and Ammunition for that Enterprize. The necessary Dispositions being concerted between the Army and the Fleet, the Count decamped from Alcamo the 18th April, and followed the Marquis de Lede, who retreating towards Monreale, kept Possession of that and other advantagious Posts, which led into the Plain before Palermo, fortifying at the same time a strong Pass by the Sea-side called Sfer-ra Cavallo, which was another way between the Sea-Shore and the Mountains, into the same Plain. Count De Mercy being arrived at Sala di Partenico, and not judging it adviseable to attempt the Passes which the Enemy possessed on the Road of Monreale, he divided his Army into two Bodies, sending General Zumjungen with all his Cavalry (except the Hussars and a Regiment of Dragoons) and seven Battalions of Foot, with the Artillery and Baggage, to the Sea-side, with Orders to force the Pass of Sfer-ra Cavallo, and enter that Way into the Plain of Palermo, whilst he himself with the rest of the Army ascended the difficult Mountains about Carini, in order to get down that Way into the same Plain, judging, that if the Marquis drew his Army to defend the Pass of Sferra Cavallo, he should get between him and Palermo, or at least, have the Advantage of falling upon his Rear. The Count having gained the heights of the Mountains, from whence are discovered the Plain and City of Palermo, perceived the Spanish Army encamped in the Bottom, intending to obstruct his Descent, and occupying all the Passes in the Way. Here Count De Mercy sent to Zumjungen to rejoin him, which he did by the Assistance of Guides provided by the Magistrates of Carini, leaving a Detachment under the Command of Colonel Baron de Witgenau to convoy the Artillery and Baggage by the Way of the Seaside, who arriving at the Pass of Sferra Cavallo, found it abandoned by the Spaniards. On the 21st the Germans began to descend from the Mountains, and forcing the several Passes with less Opposition than was expected, were almost all got down before Night to the bottom. The whole was a most difficult and fatiguing March, through Ways that the Inhabitants themselves had rarely practised, but which the Count surmounted with great Expedition and Military Judgement.

the

The Admiral coasting along, in Conformity to the Motions of the Army, came to an Anchor with the Fleet the 20th in Mondello Bay, and sent some of his Soldiers to take Possession of a Tower on the Point, and another at the landing Place, as also three Cassines that stood between, in order to preserve their Communication.

On the 22d the Marquis de Lede sent Colonel Lacy, his Aid de Camp, with a Letter to the Admiral, inclosing a Spanish Gazette, wherein was published the Treaty of Suspension of Arms at Sea, concluded at the Hague between the Ministers of Great Britain, France and Spain, and which was to take Place on the 10th Instant, and therefore he proposed to the Admiral, “ to come to an Agreement with him for a separate Cessation of Hostilities, as they had both full Powers for that purpose; and protested against any Violences he should commit, contrary to the plain Instructions of their Sovereigns.” This Snare laid to separate the Admiral from the German Army, had no Effect, the Admiral returning Answer, “ that he could give no Regard or Credit to a pretended Convention published in a Foreign News Paper, and even in which there was a Clause, that nothing in it should derogate from what should be agreed between him and the Marquis, for what concerns the Medi- “ terrenean Sea. That as the Spa- “ nish Minister had signed the Qua“ druple Alliance ever since the 17th “ February last, it was surprizing, “ that in all this time the Marquis “ had received no Orders for treat“ ing about the Evacuation of the “ Island, which was the necessary “ Consequence of it, but that he “ still maintained every Point and “ Post with the same Zeal and Ardor, “ as before his Master’s Accession to “ the Alliance. That the time for “ beginning the Evacuation was “ elapsed; and therefore, without “ some reasonable Security that he “ really intended it, he could come “ into no Agreement for a Suspen“ sion of Arms; but whenever he “ should be empowered to treat for “ both, he would most gladly go “ more than half way to meet him, “ and not only agree on such Mea“ sures as might put an End to the “ present
of

“ present Differences, but which “ might restore and cultivate a good “ Understanding between both Na“ tions, which no Body more ar“ dently wished for, than he did.”

This was an adventurous Proceeding in the Admiral; for his Instructions from England directed him to come to a Suspension of Arms with Spain, without staying for settling the Terms of Evacuation, which might take up time. But his Penetration shewed him, that if a Suspension took Place at Sea, the Spaniards might introduce what Succours and Troops they pleased into the Island, which would unravel all they had been doing, and if any Interruption happened in the Negotiations on foot, put the Spaniards in a better State of prosecuting the War, and perhaps protract it another Year. Their late Conduct had made him jealous of their Artifices, seeing them lay hold
of

of every Advantage to evade the Evacuation of the Island, which this Separation would encourage, and render the way to Peace more distant and difficult. He determined therefore, as the Convention for a Cessation of Arms at Sea, signed at the Hague the 29th February, left him a Liberty of treating as he thought proper, to remain united to the Germans, which he prudently saw, was the quickest Way to bring the Spaniards to a Compliance, and to come into real Measures for the Evacuation of the Island. The Event justified his Precaution, and his Conduct received at home the Approbation it deserved.

The March of the Imperialists had made the Spaniards change the Situation of their Camp, which they pitched across the Plain before Palermo, extending their left to Monte Caputo, and their Right to the Sea near the Mole of Palermo, the whole Army being under the Cannon of that City, and having strong Entrenchments before them, lined with 40 pieces of Cannon. They were provided with Plenty of all things, and seemed determined to stand the Fate of a Battle. The Germans encamped on the same Plain in the Front of the Enemy, and within a Mile and a half distance, with their Right at the foot of the Mountains from whence they had descended, and their Left reaching to Monte Pelegrino near the Sea-side, the Artillery and Baggage being arrived in their Camp by the way of Sferra Cavallo. Count De Mercy seeing himself straitened in Room, and under difficulty of subsisting, whilst the Enemy plundered and enriched themselves with the Spoils of a Country they were quickly to abandon, he determined to bring Matters to an Engagement as soon as possible.
the

possible. In Order to it, his Scheme was to endeavour to get Possession of the Mole, by which means he should flank the Enemy, and oblige them either to come to a Battle with disadvantage, or else to retire to Termini. For this purpose he detached Baron Neyperg on the 26th with six Companies of Grenadiers to dislodge the Enemy from some Posts which they had fortified on the Sea-side; and to facilitate the same, sent Baron de Witgenau with six other Companies of Grenadiers to seize on Monte Pelegrino. At the same time the Admiral detaching three Ships, to cannonade the Posts on the Sea-side, their Fire made the Spaniards abandon them, and the Imperialists took Possession of them without any Loss. These Advantages confirmed Count De Mercy in his Resolution to push his point that way, and having made the necessary dispositions, the next day day he caused to be attacked a Cassine that stood a little distance from the Enemy's Trenches, but strongly fortified with Lines and some Cannon, drawing out his whole Army at the same time in order of Battle, in case the Enemy should come out of their Camp to support it. The Lines were soon taken, but the Cassine was not carried 'till after a very vigorous Defence of above an Hour, where-in the Germans had about 140 Men killed or wounded, among the former a Prince of Anhalt, and Lieutenant General Seckendorf wounded in the Shoulders. On the 2d May, about two in the Afternoon, the Weather being very hot, and the Spanish Guard taking a Siesta, according to the Custom of that Nation, the Germans surprized a Redoubt near the Enemy's Lines, entering the same without firing a Shot, and pushing the Spaniards out with their Bayonets

Expedition to SICILY.

nets in their pieces. The Marquis de Lede being informed of it, rose from Table, and ordered the Army to be immediately drawn out, in order to retake that Fortification, which commanded the whole Line of the Camp. On the other Hand, Count De Mercy being determined to maintain his hold, both Armies were in Motion and just on the Point of Engaging, when fortunately a Courier arriving in the very Instant from Spain in a Felucca, delivered to the Marquis a Packet, containing full Powers from the King of Spain to treat and agree about the Evacuation of the Islands of Sicily and Sardinia, and the Transportation of the Army into Spain. The Marquis upon this drew off his Army, and sent Letters by a Trumpet to the General and Admiral, to inform them of his Orders. The next Morning early, the Admiral repairing to the German Camp, Officers

Expedition to SICILY.

191

cers were appointed on each Side to treat of the Suspension of Arms, and to regulate the manner of Evacuating both Islands; and Conventions were drawn up for that purpose, and signed, that for Sicily on the 6th May, and that for Sardinia two days after.

In pursuance of these Conventions, the Germans were put in Possession of Palermo and the Citadel of Castellamare the 10th, and the Spanish Army marched to Termini, a Sea-Port, about 25 Miles distant, from whence the first Embarkation consisting of about 12000 Foot and 600 Horse, sailed the 20th June for Barcelona; and the Remainder arrived at the same Place the 25th August following.

Nothing now remained to be done, but to put the Duke of Savoy in Possession of the Island of Sardinia, in order to which four Battalions of Piedmontese Troops embarked barked at Palermo under the Command of Baron St. Remi, and sailed under the Convoy of some English Men of War to Cagliari, where the Admiral arriving so soon as he had settled all Affairs in Sicily, he assisted at the Conferences, with the Ministers and Generals of the several Powers concerned, wherein was regulated the Manner of surrendering the Island by the Spanish Viceroy to the Emperor, and the Cession of the same from the Emperor to the Duke of Savoy; and, at the Instance of this Prince, the Admiral did not depart, till he had seen the whole fully executed, the Spanish Troops returned into Spain, and the Duke of Savoy put into quiet Possession of his new Kingdom.

Thus ended the War of Sicily, wherein the Fleet of Great-Britain bore so illustrious a Part, that the Fate of the Island was wholly governed verned by its Operations, both Competitors agreeing, that the one could not have conquered, nor the other have been subdued, without it. Never was any Service conducted in all it's Parts with greater Zeal, Activity and Judgement, nor was ever the British Flag in so high Reputation and Respect in those distant Parts of Europe. The late King, who had named the Admiral for that Expedition, and knew his Abilities, used to say to his Ministers, when they applied for Instructions to be sent to him for his Guidance on certain important Occasions, that he would send him none, for he knew how to act without any; and indeed all the Measures he took abroad were so exact and just, as to square with the Councils and Plan of Policy at home. The Cause of the Emperor being become the Cause of his Master, he served the Interests of that

O

Prince

Prince with a Zeal and Fidelity that stood a Pattern to his own Subjects. He lived in such Harmony with the Imperial Vice-roys and Generals, as has been seldom seen among Fellow Subjects united in Command, the Want of which has proved the Ruin of many important Expeditions. He was incapable of performing his Duty in a cold or negligent Manner, and when any Service was committed to his Management, he devoted his whole Time and Application to it; nor could any Fatigue or Indisposition of Body ever divert or interrupt his Attention from any Point that required present Dispatch. To this it might be in great Measure owing, that he was never unfortunate in any Undertaking, nor miscarried in any Service that was entrusted to his Direction. For whoever will trace upwards to the Springs and Causes Causes of Publick or private Events, shall find (except where the immediate Finger of Providence is visible) that what is usually called Ill-Luck, is generally the Effect of Negligence, or Imprudence. He always proceeded upon solid Principles, and left nothing to Fortune, that could be accomplished by Foresight and Application. His Firmness and plain Dealing were so apparent to the Foreigners who treated with him upon Business, that it contributed much to the Dispatch and Success of his Transactions with them; for they could depend upon what he said, and as they saw he used no Arts or Chicanes himself, and had too discerning a Spirit to suffer them to pass unobserved in others, they often found it their best Policy to leave ~~their~~ Interests in his Hands and Management, being very sure of a most impartial and punctual Performance

O 2

mance of whatever he engaged in. His Reputation was so thoroughly established in this particular, that in the frequent Disputes and Altercations which arose between the Savoyards and Germans in the Course of the War, and between the latter and the Spaniards at the Conclusion of it, wherein little Faith or Confidence was given to the Promises or Asseverations of each other, he was the common Umpire between them, always stemming and opposing any extravagant or unjust Demands (which the over-bearing Temper of the German General was very apt to suggest, where he had the superior hand) and reconciling, as much as possible, the Violences of War, with the Rules of Honour and Justice. When he departed from Italy to attend his late Majesty at Hanover, the King among many gracious Expressions, told him, that he had found found out the Secret of obliging his Enemies as well as Friends, and that the Court of Spain had mentioned with great Acknowledgement his fair and friendly Behaviour in the Provision of Transports and other Necessaries for the Embarkation of their Troops, and in protecting them from many Vexations and Oppressions that had been attempted. No wonder, that a Man endowed with such Talents and such a Disposition, left behind him in Italy, and other Foreign Parts, the Character of a great Soldier, an able Statesman, and an honest Man.

To give some Description of his Person, he was of a slender Constitution, but well supplied with Spirits, which did not display themselves so much in Gaiety of Conversation (for he was modest in his Nature) as in Activity in all the Duties and Functions of Life or Business, in which he was indefatigable, and, by a continued Habit of Industry, had hardned and inured a Body, not naturally strong, to Patience of any Fatigue. He had made no great Proficiency in School-Learning (which the early Age of going to Sea seldom admits of) but his great Diligence, joined with excellent natural Parts, and a just Sense of Honour, made him capable of conducting difficult Negotiations and Commissions with proper Dignity and Address. In his younger days he was both in the Sea and Land Service, being an Officer of Foot in the Garrison of Tangier, but preferring the Sea, he was soon distinguished and favoured by that great Seaman Admiral Russel (afterwards Earl of Orford) who made him his first Captain at the Age of twenty nine, a Post equal in Rank to a Rear-Admiral, and by Degrees he arrived arrived to be a Commissioner of the Admiralty, and first Admiral of the Fleet, in which Quality he commanded in the War of Sicily. On his repairing to Hanover, his late Majesty was pleased to express his Regard to his eminent Services, by making him Treasurer of the Navy, and Rear-Admiral of Great-Britain; and soon after a Privy Counsellor, and Peer of Great-Britain, with the Title of Viscount Torrington; and afterwards Knight of the Bath, upon the Revival of that Order. When his present Majesty came to the Crown, he was pleased to place him at the Head of his naval Affairs, as first Lord Commissioner of the Admiralty, in which high Station he died in the Year 1733, in the 70th Year of his Age.

A P P E N D I X.

INSTRUCTIONS for our Trusty and Well-beloved Sir George Byng Knight and Baronet, whom we have appointed to command our Fleet now going to the Mediterranean. Given at our Court at Kensington the 26th Day of May 1718, in the Fourth Year of our Reign.

L. S.

George R.

I.  HEREAS the Crown of Great-Britain by the several Treaties made at Utrecht the 14th day of March 1713 NS, with the Emperor and the late most Christian King, became obliged to see an exact Observation of the Armistice and Neutrality then established in Italy, and was Guarantee for the full Performance of the Stipulations at that Time

Time solemnly agreed to on that head: And whereas by a Treaty made between us and our good Brother the Emperor of Germany at Westminster the 25th day of May 1716, We stand engaged to assist, maintain and defend him in the Possession of all the Kingdoms, Provinces and Rights, which he then actually enjoyed in Europe; And whereas the Catholick King hath in an hostile Manner invaded the Territories belonging to the said Emperor, and by Force of Arms hath taken from him the Island and Kingdom of Sardinia, and is still making great and warlike Preparations for carrying on his Designs further against the other Dominions belonging to his Imperial Majesty in Italy, contrary to the Tenor of the aforesaid Treaties: And whereas since this unhappy Rupture, We, as a Friend to both Parties, have not ceased to employ our best Offices

ces in order to accommodate the Differences, and put an End to this War, which, if continued, will endanger the publick Tranquillity of the rest of Europe. And whereas We have made particular and earnest Instances with our good Brother the King of Spain, that he would consent to a Suspension of Arms, during which the Negotiations for Peace might be more easily and effectually carried on: And whereas his said Catholick Majesty hath appeared to Us not averse to the suspending his further Enterprizes, and thereby facilitating our good Offices towards a happy Accommodation; We therefore for the better fulfilling the several Engagements we lie under by the Treaties aforementioned, and for promoting, in the best and most effectual manner, the measures that may tend to the bringing about an entire Reconciliation and perfect Friendship

Friendship between the said Parties now engaged in War, and thereby putting a Stop to the fatal Consequences, which might otherwise ensue from these Hostilities, have thought it fit and necessary for the purposes aforesaid, and for the Wellfare of Europe in General, to send a strong Fleet of our Ships of War into the Mediterranean under your Command.

II. You are therefore, upon the Receipt of these our Instructions, forthwith to proceed to the Mediterranean with our said Fleet, and being arrived in the Streights, you shall immediately give Notice to the Catholick King, by our Minister residing at his Court, of your Arrival in those Seas, and that you are instructed in our Name to promote all Measures, that may best contribute to the composing the Differences, that are arisen between him and the Emperor.

III. You

III. You shall from thence without loss of Time, Wind and Weather permitting, proceed to Portmahon, and being arrived there, you shall by Expresses give Advice of the same to the Vice-Roy of the Kingdom of Naples, and to the Governor of the Dutchy of Milan, and let them know the Purport of your Instructions, that you are come with our Fleet into those Parts to make good our Treaties with the Emperor, and to hinder the further Violation of the same by the Arms of the Catholick King; and to that End you will hold a Correspondence with the said Vice-roy and Governor during your Stay in the Mediterranean, and let them know, that you are to take Measures, in Concert with them, for preventing any further Breach of the Neutrality of Italy, which by our Treaty we are obliged to see preserved; and as you may probably at Port-

mahon

mahon get the best Intelligence of the Preparations and Proceedings both of the Imperialists and the Spaniards, you will accordingly take such Stations with our Fleet under your Command, as may be most proper to obstruct any new Hostilities, and to put these our Instructions in Execution.

IV. And as a Suspension of Arms, and a Forbearance of all Acts of Hostility on each side in those Parts, is absolutely necessary for the setting on foot and concluding the proper Negotiations of Peace, you are accordingly to make Instances with both Parties to cease from using any further Acts of Hostility. But in Case the Spaniards do still insist with their Ships of War and Forces to attack the Kingdom of Naples, or other the Territories of the Emperor in Italy, or to land in any Part of Italy, which can only be with a design to invade the Emperor's Dominions, against whom only they have have declared War by invading Sardinia; or if they should endeavour to make themselves Masters of the Kingdom of Sicily, which must be with a design to invade the Kingdom of Naples, in such Case you are, with all your Power, to hinder and obstruct the same. But if it should so happen, that at your Arrival with our Fleet under your Command in the Mediterranean, the Spaniards should already have landed any Troops in Italy in order to invade the Emperor's Territories, you shall endeavour amicably to dissuade them from persevering in such an Attempt, and offer them your Assistance to help them to withdraw their Troops, and put an End to all further Acts of Hostility. But in Case these your friendly Endeavours should prove ineffectual, you shall, by keeping Company with, or intercepting their Ships or Convoy, or, if it be necessary, by openly opposing them, them, defend the Emperor's Territories from any further Attempts.

V. And whereas We have thought it for our Service, to send four Battalions of our Forces on Board our Fleet under your Command; upon your Arrival at our Town of Portmahon, you are to put the said four Battalions on Shore there, to relieve the Garrisons in our Island of Minorca, and you are to take the said Garrisons on Board our Ships of War, in order to employ the same in such manner and according to such Instructions, as you shall receive from Us.

VI. And whereas We have thought fit to recall our Trusty and Well-beloved Charles Cornwall, Esq; whom we had appointed our Plenipotentiary for concluding a Peace with the Moors, and have empowered you to renew that Negotiation, you are therefore to dispose of the Ships now under the Command of the said Vice-Admiral Cornwall,

Cornwall, and employ the whole Squadron, or any part thereof, in the manner you shall judge most proper for promoting the several respective Services, wherein you are employed in the Mediterranean.

G. R.

Mr. Secretary CRAGG's Letter to the Admiral.

Cockpit, May 27th O. S. 1718.

S I R,

I Inclose to you his Majesty's Instructions, as well with relation to your Conduct in the Mediterranean, as to the Treaty with the Moors.

After what passed yesterday between my Lord Sunderland, my Lord Stanhope, You and Me, when we were together at Lord Stanhope's Lodgings, there remains nothing for me but to wish you a good Voyage, and good Success in your

Un-

Undertakings. I do it very heartily, and am with great Truth,

S I R,

Your most Obedient Humble Servant.

J. CRAGGS.

Extract of a Letter from Earl Stanhope to the Admiral.

BAYONE, September 2d 1718.

BEING arrived here last Night in six days from Madrid, I do, in pursuance of the Commands I have from his Majesty, take this first Opportunity of acquainting you, that nothing has passed at Madrid, which should divert you from pursuing the Instructions you have.

If the News, which I learn at Bayone, that the Citadel of Messina is taken, be not true, or if, notwithstanding that the Spaniards have that Port, their Fleet by contrary Winds, or any other Accident, should not have got into the Harbour, and that you have an Opportunity of attacking them, I am perswaded you will not let such an Occasion slip, and I agree perfectly in Opinion with what is recommended to you by Mr. Secretary Craggs, that the first Blow you give, should, if possible, be decisive.

P

or

The two great Objects which I think we ought to have in View are to destroy their Fleet, if possible, and to preserve such a Footing in Sicily, as may enable us to Land an Army there.

Copy

LIST of the British Fleet under the Command of Sir George Byng, in the Action off of Cape Passaro in Sicily in the Year 1718.

Rate	Ships	Captains	Men	Guns
2	Barfleur.	{ 1. George Saunders. }	730	90	Admiral Byng. { 2. Richard Lestock. }
3	Sbrewsbury.	John Balchen.	545	80	Vice-Admiral Cornwall.
	Dorsetshire.	John Furzer.	535	80	Rear-Admiral Delaval.
	Burford.	Charles Vanbrugh.	440	70
	Essex.	Richard Rowzier.	440	70
	Grafton.	Nicholas Haddock.	440	70
	Lenox.	Charles Strickland.	440	70
	Bredah.	Barrow Harris.	440	70
	Orford.	Edward Falkingham.	440	70
	Kent.	Thomas Matthews.	440	70
	Royal Oak.	Thomas Kempton.	440	70
	Captain.	Archibald Hamilton.	440	70
4	Canterbury.	George Walton.	365	60
	Dreadnought.	William Haddock.	365	60
	Rippon.	Christopher Obrian.	365	60
	Superbe.	Streynsham Master.	365	60
	Rupert.	Arthur Field.	365	60
	Dunkirk.	Francis Drake.	365	60
	Montague.	Thomas Beverly.	365	60
	Rocheſter.	Joſeph Winder.	280	50
	Argyl.	Coningsby Norbury.	280	50
			8885	1400
					.

To be plac'd after Page 310.

LIST of the Spanish Fleet in the Action off of Cape Passaro in the Year 1718, under the Command of Don Antonio de Castaneta, including two Ships which were amongst those that Captain Walton destroy'd on the Coast of Sicily.

Ships	Captains	Men	Guns
St. Philip the Royal.	-	650	74	Admiral Castaneta . Taken.
Prince of Asturias.	-	550	70	Rear-Admiral Chacon . Taken.
The Royal.	-	400	60	Rear-Admiral Mari . Taken.
St. Lewis.	-	400	60	Rear-Admiral Guevara . Escaped.
St. Ferdinand.	-	400	60	Rear-Admiral Cammock . Escaped.
				Sunk afterwards in Messina Mole.
St. Carlos.	Prince De Cbalay .	400	60	Taken.
Sancta Isabella.	Don Andrez Rezio .	400	60	Taken.
Sancta Rosa.	Don Antonio Gonfalez .	400	60	Taken.
St. John Baptist.	Don Francisco Gerraera .	400	60	Escaped.
St. Peter.	Don Antonio Arisaga .	400	60	Escaped. Afterwards lost in the Gulph of Tarento .
Pearl.	Don Gabriel Alderete .	300	50	Escaped.
-	-	300	50	Burnt.
St. Isidro.	Don Manuel vile Vicentia .	300	46	Taken.
L'Esperanza.	Don Juan Delfino & Borlandine .	300	46	Burnt.
Volante.	Don Antonio Escudera .	300	44	Taken.
-	-	300	44	Burnt.
Hermiona.	Don Rodrigo de Torres .	300	44	Escaped. Sunk afterwards in Messina Mole.
Porcupine.	A Frenchman .	250	44	Escaped.
Surprize.	Don Michel Saday , Knight of Malta .	250	36	Taken.
Juno.	Don Pedro Moyana .	250	36	Taken.
La Galera.	Don Francisco Alverera .	200	30	Escaped.
La Castilla.	Don Francisco Leanio , Knight of Malta .	200	30	Escaped.
Count de Tholouse.	Don Joseph Focoua .	200	30	Escaped. Taken in Messina Mole.
Tyger.	Don - - - Covaigue .	240	26	Taken.
Eagle.	Don Lucas Masnata .	240	24	Taken.
St. Francis Areres.	- - - - Jacob , a Scotchman .	100	22	Escaped.
Little St. Ferdinand.	-	150	20	Escaped.
Little St. John.	Don Ignatio Valevale .	150	20	Escaped. Taken afterwards.
Arrow.	Don Juan Papajena .	100	18	Escaped.
		8830	1284

There were Seven Gallies, which are of great use in Battle, especially in calm Weather.

Copy of the King's Letter to the Admiral, written by his own Hand.

Monfieur le Chevalier BYNG.

QUoy que je n'aye pas encore reçu de vos nouvelles en droiture, j'ay appris la Victoire que la Flotte a remportée sous vos Ordres, & je n'ay pas voulu vous différer le Contentement que mon approbation de votre Conduite vous pourroit donner. Je vous en remercie, & je Souhaite que vous en temoigniez ma satisfaction à tous les braves gens qui se sont distingués dans cette occasion. Le Secrétaire d'Etat Cragge a Ordre de vous informer plus au long de mes intentions, mais j'ay voulu vous assurer moy même que se suis, Monsieur le Chevalier Byng,

Vôtre bon Amy,

GEORGE R.

A Hampton-Court ce 23 d'Aout 1718.

Copy of the Emperor's Letter to the Admiral, written by his own hand.

Monsieur Amiral & Chevalier Byng. J'ay reçu avec beaucoup de Satisfaction & de Joye par le porteur de celle cy la vôtre du 18^{me} d'Aout. Quand je sceus que vous etiez nommé de sa Majesté le Roy vôtre maitre pour commander sa Flotte dans la Méditerranée, je conceus d'abord toutes les bonnes esperances. Le glorieux Succès pourtant les a en quelque maniere surpassé. Vous avez en cette occasion donné des preuves d'une valeur, conduite, & Zele pour la commune cause très singulier; la gloire qui vous en resulte est bien grande, mais aussi en rien moindre ma reconnoissance, comme vous l'expliquera plus le Comte de Hamilton. Comptez toujours sur la continuation de ma reconnaissance & de mon Affection envers vous, priant Dieu qu'il vous ait en sa Sainte garde. A Vienne ce 2^{me} Octobre 1718.

CHARLES.

Copy

Copy of a Letter from the great Master of the Household of the Queen of Denmark, to the Admiral.

SA Majesté la Reine m'a Ordonnée de Saluer Vòtre Excellence de sa part très gracieusement, et de luy feliciter et marquer en même tems la grande part que Sa Majesté prend à la glorieuse & complete Victoire que la Flotte Angloise ait emportée sous le Commandement de Vòtre Excellence sur celle des Espagnols. Sa Majesté la Reine en est d'autant plus sensible, puisqu' Elle a eüe l'Avantage & la Satisfaction l'année passée de connoitre vòtre Excellence plus particulièrement. Pour mon particulier, j'en felicite pareillement Vòtre Excellence, luy souhaitant le même bonheur en toutes les occasions & rencontres, quand il S'agit de combattre avec Son Ennemi, ou ceux qui veulent troubler le repos publique. J'ay l'honneur d'être avec avec beaucoup de respect & considération,

MONSIEUR,

de Vôte Excellence

A Copenhague
ce 26 Sept. 1718.

le très humble & très Obeïssant Serviteur,

MUNICH.

Copy of a Letter from the Emperor
to the Admiral

Monsieur Byng Amiral & Commandant en Chef de l'Escadre de sa Majesté Britannique dans la mer Mediterranée.
Par les Representations du Comte de Gallas mon Conseiller d'Etat Vice-roy & Capitaine General au Royaume de Naples, & du Comte de Meroi Commandant en Chef mes Troupes en Sicile, j'ai été informé du Projet au quel par vôtre Zele & activité on avoit travaillé, pour terminer d'au-tant plus tôt avec Succès la guerre. en Sicile, par lequel on concluoit, que le moyen moyen plus seur & plus prompt, étoit d'envoyer au dit Royaume mes Troupes Imperiales destinées à l'entreprise de Sardaigne. Comme les raisons qui persuadent l'exécution du Projet conviennent en même tems à l'Observance du Traité de le Quadruple Alliance, & que non seulement ne rendent point difficile l'attaque de la Sardaigne, mais, au contraire, elles en facilitent l'expédition réglée par le dit Traité, j'ai jugé convenable d'approuver le sus dit Projet. Ainsi pendant que mon cher Frere le Roy de la grande Bretagne, & la Cour de Paris, vont être informez par les Couriers Extraordinaires, que je leurs ai fait dépêcher, des raisons qui ont obligé de Suivre les avis portez dans le Projet, je veux que vous Soyiez assuré par cette lettre de la Satisfaction que j'ai de l'Amour & Zele que, par vos Conseils, vous avez fait paroître dans cette rencontre, soit pour l'avancement & progrès de la Cause commune, soit pour

pour les Interêts & Attachement à ma Personne Imperiale, & Auguste maison. C'est pour ces raisons, & pour l'opinion juste & avantageuse que j'ai de votre amour envers moi, & de Vòtre Sage Conduite, que dans toutes les Occasions je vous donnerai des Marques de mon Affection, de mon Estime, & du bon Souvenir que j'ai des Services que vous m'avez rendus. Et tant Monsieur Byng Amiral & Commandant en Chef de l'Escadre de Sa Majesté Britannique dans la Mer Mediterranée, Dieu vous ait sous sa Sainte Garde. A Vienne ce deuxieme Aout mille Sept cent dix neuf.

CHARLES.

De Vilana Perlas.

F I N I S.

U. S. I. LIBRARY

15187
Class No. 942.7071 ~~355982~~ Book No. 899A ~~899A~~ BYN